'Business' down, Ugandan economy up

"We haven't heard many screams for several months from Makindye prison. Business has apparently dropped off" — A Ugandan neighbor.

by RAYMOND WILKINSON

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — The scars of nearly seven years of brutality and mismanagement disfigure this beautiful land.

The northern towns of Gulu and Lira reportedly are still virtual ghost centers, with many of their citizens dead or refugees from purges earlier this year.

A separate crackdown against Christians in the southwest town of Masama is still under way. Several hundred persons have been rounded up and a few killed, according to sources here.

A ONCE HAPPY-go-lucky population is cowed and frightened. In Kampala it is virtually impossible for a visitor to engage a Ugandan in conversation.

A once bustling economy is also still in tatters. The Uganda shilling is virtually worthless.

Everyone engages in "Magendo," the blackmarket, to survive in an economy where on egg costs 50 cents, a pound of butter about $9 and a new auto up to $62,500.

Things are improving slightly in Uganda, however, compared with the earlier part of the year when there were at least two assassination attempts against President Idi Amin, around 5,000 persons were killed in subsequent purges and there was virtually no food or commodities in the cities.

THE KILLINGS have dropped off. The economy, buoyed by the export of Uganda's coffee at record prices, also is picking up.

A realistic three-year "action program" which spells out Uganda's economic shortcomings could, if carefully followed, put the country back into shape again, according to independent observers in Kampala.

In the suburbs of this pleasant city, set on 46 hills close to Lake Victoria, is Makindye prison.

It is an unimpressive place, surrounded by tin and mud shanties. A few hundred yards away are palatial homes for foreigners and rich Ugandans.

MAKINDYE, A rambling compound surrounded by a rusting and tattered barbed-wire fence, is the headquar-

Bomb rips car, damages houses

by DANN GIRE

A pipe bomb went off early Sunday morning in Hoffman Estates, heavily damaging one car and sending metal fragments into two nearby houses and another auto. No injuries were reported.

The explosion came less than 16 hours after two children found an unexploded bomb under a slide near an Arlington Heights church, the second bomb found in the Northwest suburbs in a week.

"I heard a big explosion. At first I thought it was the furnace," said Dick Nishimoto, 54, of 352 S. Washington Blvd., Hoffman Estates, whose car was heavily damaged by the blast Sunday morning.

HE RAN INTO the living room of his home at 4 a.m. and saw "a big ball of fire" outside his picture window.

"All I saw was orange," Nishimotos 16-year-old daughter, Pam, said. "I thought it was a tree on fire. I called the fire department."

Police and firefighters arrived quickly and extinguished the blaze in Nishimoto's black Plymouth Duster in the driveway.

Fragments of a thick pipe-bomb were found under the car. They also were found in the Nishimoto home, a car across the street and another house down the block.

A LARGE BOMB fragment blasted its way through Nishimoto's storm door, main door, a closet door and imbedded itself in a piece of two by four in the closet.

Bits of the bomb and debris shattered windows on the Nishimoto home and the home of Harvey Frost, 345 S. Washington Blvd. Pipe fragments also ripped through a Mazda, a car belonging to Bill Anderson, 19, of 353 S. Washington Blvd., flattening a tire, shattering a window and blowing a 1½ inch hole in the car's driver's side just in front of the rear fender. No estimate of damage was available.

Police said they have no suspects or motives in the bombing, which they said might have been a "random

'Natural foods' not healthier: FDA chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Health food is no better for you and often more expensive than food available at the supermarket, the head of the Food and Drug Administration said in an interview published Sunday.

Donald Kennedy, noting he hoped to strengthen FDA authority over foods, said "there's not a whit of logic" to suggestions natural foods are better because they have no chemical additives.

"Even if you assume that food additives are generally bad for you," Kennedy told U.S. News and World Report, "it doesn't follow that their absence somehow confers safety."

Aflatoxin, a mold that grows on corn and peanuts, "is as natural as it can be and about the worse carcinogen we know," Kennedy said.

"NATURAL FOODS often cost more, but have no benefits that we can see over foods available in the regular marketplace."

Kennedy, a former Stanford University biology professor, said he wants changes in federal food laws "to broaden our authority to insure safe and wholesome products."

Consumers need more adequate information about the nutritional value of food, Kennedy said. The government should 'make sure advertising claims (on food) are based on the information contained in the label or cover."

In addition to food, the FDA has a number of products undtr review, he said, including ingredients in over-the-counter drugs, cosmetics and liquid protein diets.

Son dies in auto accident

Woman fights for drink age hike

by NANCY GOTLER

Rebecca Swartz is crusading to give meaning to her son's death.

The Evanston housewife had never been politically active before her son, Wesley, 38, of Chicago, was killed on Labor Day in a hit-and-run accident near Arlington Heights.

But since then she has become a vocal proponent of a proposed ordinance that would raise the minimum legal drinking age in Arlington Heights and other Northwest suburbs to 21. And she plans to take her fight all the way to Gov. James R. Thompson's office.

"I believe that drinking was a factor in my son's death and I have to try to stop anyone else from being hurt," she said.

She plans to attend the Nov. 21 meeting of the Arl. Hts. Village Board and lend her support to a recommendation from the village legal committee to raise the local minimum drinking age to 21.

IN 1973 THE Illinois General Assembly lowered the legal drinking age for beer and wine to 19. Since then, about 55 communities around the state, including Schaumburg, have used their home-rule powers to raise the legal drinking age to 21.

"I think raising the drinking age in Arlington Heights would help prevent accidents like the one that killed my son from happening," Mrs. Swartz said. "Too many innocent lives are being lost. I'm going to further my cause any way I can and intend on contacting the governor's office about statewide legislation.

Swartz died on Palatine Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township Sept. 5 when his Volkswagen was rammed from behind by what witnesses say was a 1971 or 1972 Ford LTD. He was returning home from a Wisconsin outing with his wife, Mary Ann, who was not hurt.

INVESTIGATOR Earl Lundquist of the Cook County Sheriff's police said a suspect who owns a car similar to the one described leaving the scene has been qustioned but "there is not the slightest indication alcohol was involved." The suspect was not charged.

He said although the car that hit Swartz was speeding, it was not being driven on the wrong side of the road or in a manner to indicate the driver was drunk. He said the only way to prove a driver had been drinking is to administer a breath test at the scene.

Still, Mrs. Swartz remains undaunted.

"That kind of driving isn't normal," she said. "I'm convinced drinking had to be a contributing factor in the loss of my son.

"It's ruined our lives and I don't think I'll ever get over it," Mrs. Swartz said. "I'm inconsolable. And I feel bitter because his death was so needless. That's why I'm working so hard to get these laws changed. I've got to see that some good comes from it all."

2 plus 2 equals 4, but math is new game

by RENA WISH COHEN

Back in the "dark ages" when schoolchildren were learning that 2 plus 2 equals 4, math had all the excitement of an evening washing dishes.

Multiplication tables and story problems were the entire ho-hum repertoire, with some flash cards thrown in at home by well-meaning parents.

Now adults would hardly recognize their old nemesis.

TODAY, FOR EXAMPLE, the arithmetic lesson for second grades at Schaumburg's Dooley School, might involve watching a filmstrip about "Subtraction Ella" — a spunky cartoon character who solves a boodle of subtraction problems to prove herself worthy of marrying a prince, only to turn him down after passing the test.

Sixth graders at Salk School in Rolling Meadows sometimes are treated to a painless exercise in computation during an annual day of "hooky" at the local bowling alley.

And eighth graders at MacArthur Junior High School in Prospect Heights, knit their brows over Mastermind — a commercial game in which one player tries to guess the pattern of colored pegs hidden by his opponent. Of course, the students usually don't realize the game is teaching them the problem-solving method the "if X, then Y"

MATH HAS CHANGED. More than ever before, educators are striving to end its drab image.

There is enough variety in the math classroom, teachers say, to match the infinite variations in how children learn. It is no longer enough to turn to page 47 in your math book at the appointed hour, or to sharpen your pencils for your daily quiz.

"It's just a matter of trying to make education appealing to kids," says Mary Kay Karl, math coordinator for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. "A game won't teach, but it's a neater way of drilling than passing out a ditto sheet and making them write their multiplication tables 25 times."

That kind of rote repetition went out with crewcuts and peddlepushers in the late 1950s, when Sputnik sent the United States scurrying for a math curriculum that would breed prodigies and not parrots. But the replacement — the so-called "new math" — went to the other extreme.

"We were told to get the understanding in and not to rehash the drill," recalls Royce Hargrove, and editor with Addison-Wesley Publishing Co. in Menlo Park, Calif., and one of the authors of an early modern math program. "But it didn't come out that way. People picked up the idea that if a child understands how to do it, he doesn't need to practice it." Drill, in effect, became unfashionable.

HARGROVE, HIS colleagues and Northwest suburban educators insist the shortcomings of the "new math" were blown way out of proportion — that the horror stories about children who could not add and subtract were merely by-products of teachers overwhelmed by the new content, and not fatal flaws in the curriculum itself.

True or not, the criticisms led publishers to take another look. Gradually, they phased out $10 words like "commutative" and returned to the more traditional approach parents and teachers were demanding.

Drill became respectable again.

SCHOOLS STARTED getting "back to basics."

But that doesn't mean educators have turned the clock back to 1950. They could not do that, any more than they could revert to Dick and Jane.

Take "new math" and its idea that "old math" was bad because it didn't teach students to understand, for example, what multiplication was.

If teachers abandoned that idea, they would go back to the days when "students could put '23' down and '4'

Policewomen shoot, capture would-be rapists

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—Armed policewomen have shot one would-be rapist and captured another since the start of a decoy operations against sex attacks in and around the California State University campus.

The decoy unit was formed in response to a series of sexual assaults, which number 30 since the start of the year. Six women, including a nun who was raped in a convent, were assaulted in the university area last week.

Police said the second arrest was made early Saturday and it occurred at the same location where another undercover policewoman shot and wounded another attacker Thursday.

Decoy officer Linda MacPherson, armed and wired with a microphone linking her to nearby police units, was the latest rape target before dawn Saturday.

A MAN WHO approached her at a bus-stop bench followed her, threw her to the ground and jumped on her. Three officers moved in and arrested the unidentified man, who apparently had been taking drugs.

In the same spot, 5-foot-3 policewoman Jo Ann Punneo, 30, earlier shot and critically wounded a man who tried to rape her at knifepoint only 15 minutes after the campus decoy operation began.

Officer Punneo wheeled quickly to her left, drawing her service revolver from her belt, and shot her assailant in the chest. Police identified him as Alexander Salazar, 30, and he was reported in fair condition Sunday at San Jose Hospital.

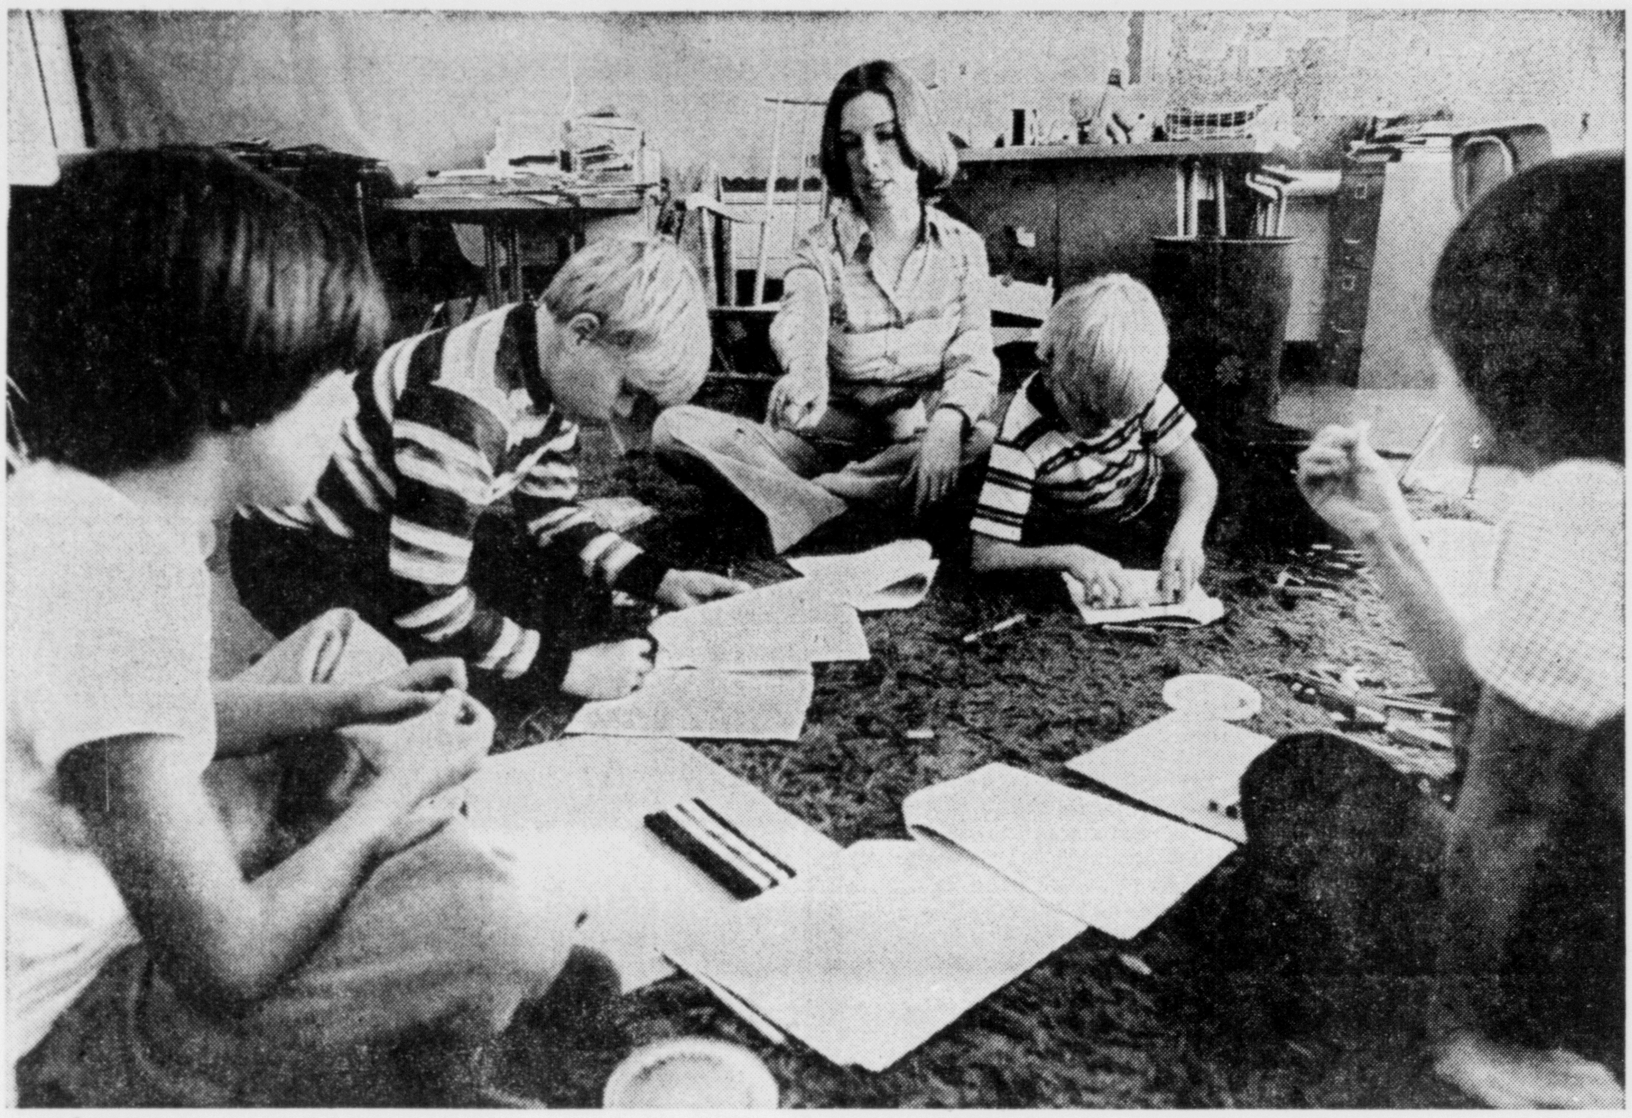
The week of terror at the university began Nov. 6 when a 46-year-old woman was dragged into bushes and assaulted. Last Monday night, a student was raped at knifepoint in a school building. On Tuesday, a 25-year-old teacher's aide fought off an attacker who she said had a "Fu Manchu mustache."

ON WEDNESDAY, a man wielding a heavy garden tool broke into a convent of Five Wounds Catholic Church, half a block from the campus, and raped the nun in her second-floor bedroom.

In the past month, armed rapists have attacked beneath the stairwell of a university garage, in a restroom at the education building and in a sorority house where four women were threatened and one was sexually assaulted.

Two hundred whistles and shriek alarms have been sold at the university bookstore. Six officers have been added to night university patrols. And the school paper has printed rape prevention tips, including suggestions that women walk in pairs and yell "Fire" when attacked.

Police Lt. Arthur Knopf said a criminal element has been brought into the area by the conversion of many homes near the campus — once fraternities and sororities — into halfway houses and residences for transients.



MATH WITHOUT A BOOK? That's the way Greenbrier School students in Elaine Seaman's class in Arlington Heights learn it. While Mrs. Seaman's class primarily uses individually-prescribed worksheets and games, other Northwest suburban math teachers are using their own methods to achieve the same end: turning out students with better skills in math.

Teacher minus text may be a plus

Today's math blends the old, new

Talk to most Northwest suburban teachers about today's new, livelier math, and they'll give a lot of credit to the "wonderful" book they're using, or the "complete" multimedia packages offered by textbook publishers.

Not Elaine Seaman.

In her fifth grade class at Greenbrier School in Arlington Heights Dist. 25, there is no such thing as a math book — no ready-made publisher's outline.

THE MATH PROGRAM Elaine Seaman uses is one part showmanship — merged in a manner that is nobody's but her own.

It all started, Mrs. Seaman says, because she did not believe she could keep tabs on Johnny's work as well as Susie's if she chained herself to a text.

"If every student works through the book at his own speed, what checks and balances are there?" she said. "(To keep track of each student), you could only have the kids in the same book, on the same page. And I didn't like that at all."

SO FIVE YEARS AGO, Mrs. Seaman scrapped the book altogether. Her antidote: packets of math worksheets that change with each child, depending on his talents or weaknesses. Every child must earn a certain number of points to complete a packet, but if one child is stuck on adding fractions, for example, he can work out his problems while the other students go on.

For the student, that means a lot of individual attention. For Mrs. Seaman, it means a lot of work:

- Scraping together worksheets from any and every source, and writing them herself when she can't find what she wants.
- Daily, in-class checking of each child's progress to identify problems before they fester.
- Nightly restocking of worksheets in each child's folder, choosing more drills for those who need it, more challenge for those who do not.
- Periodic prescribing of games or other aids for children having trouble grasping a concept.
- An "anytime" testing schedule geared to each child's rate of learning. Some students, she says, complete the year's 13 or 14 packets by March and go on to design their own math programs.

And that's only half the story.

With no textbook explanations to follow, Mrs. Seaman's students spend a good deal of time learning by working with "as many things as they can get their hands on."

They will learn place value by trading chips, just like in a casino.

They will play strategy games like Hex and Mastermind to learn to use their heads — because, Mrs. Seaman says, "that's all math is."

And they will "see" fractions long before they write them, tinkering with finger-width, multicolored chunks of plastic called Cuisenaire rods, and sectioning off nail and wood grids called Geoboards into smaller and smaller rubberband units.

"Then I'll ask them which they would rather have — 1/8 of a pizza or 1/64. They can see it on the Geoboard. Otherwise, they might think of 1/64 as bigger."

beneath it and an 'x' beside it and wouldn't have any feeling for what they were doing," said Marv Christensen, coordinator of math and testing in High School Dist. 214.

SO THEY DID NOT abandon it. Today, Christensen said, textbooks still talk about "four sets of 23" or "adding 23 four times." Some even explain the "ladder method" of multiplication, which looked so complicated to parents in the new math era. But those are only intermediate, explanatory steps leading to the traditional shorthand: 23 x 4 equals 92.

In other ways, too, math has grown up to keep pace with new learning theories and changes in society:

- Gone are the days when the use of "crutches" was pooh-poohed. If it takes a game or buttons or apples for Johnny to understand that 8 - 3 equals 5, so be it, says Stella Sczygielski and Margery Ditton, who have taught first grade in Des Plaines Dist. 62 since before such aids were considered legitimate.

"Once you see the insight (in children using these aids), you don't want to go back," said Mrs. Ditton.

- With calculators to fall back on, the ability to divide 86,792 by 498,666 doesn't matter as much as it used to. What's important, teachers say, is that children learn when to multiply and divide to solve a problem. It takes logic. And strategy.

Hence the emphasis is on games like Mastermind, and an effort to make math problems relevant. Math texts by Scott-Foresman Publishing Co. in Glenview no longer ask "how many gallons of paint it takes to paint the barn," says editor Nick Lovdjieff. Today, they talk about planning menus and buying groceries.

- More and more, schools are seeking ways to "individualize" math — to let slow students linger on things that stump them, and faster students zip along on their own merry way.

At East Maine Dist. 63's Nathanson School in Des Plaines, for example, third grade team teachers Elaine Lampros and Barbara Ott favor a method so individualized that the class rarely comes together as a "math class" per se.

Instead, students work at their own speed through a series of publisher's ditto sheets. One child may be on sheet 4 while another is tackling sheet 11. The advantage, the teachers believe, is that students will not feel like they're competing with one another, and "the slowest kid will end up achieving more."

Medical, bar associations ask pot decriminalization

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Medical Assn. and the American Bar Assn. issued a joint appeal to Congress and state legislatures Sunday to repeal criminal penalties for use of marijuana.

The combined appeal on such a sensitive issue, a rarity by two major professional associations, was released by Dr. John H. Budd, AMA president, and William B. Spann, head of the ABA.

"We believe the time has come to liberalize laws regarding the possession of marijuana for personal use," said the five-paragraph statement by the two Chicago-based orgainzations, both of which previously had urged the lessening of criminal penalties concerning marijuana.

"IN TOO MANY states, statutes exact punishment that far exceeds the crime. We agree with Presidnet Carter, who showtd a reasonable attitude in asking that the possession of insignificant amounts for personal use should not subject the user to criminal charges."

The appeal was released as the Senate prepared to consider a committee-approved bill that would eliminate jail terms and the arrest of marijuana users on federal property who carried up to an ounce of pot. A similar measure is pending in the House.

The joint AMA-ABA appeal also urged that state legislatures across the nation move to eliminate criminal penalties as well. Nine states so far have curtailed marijuana penalties while several others have killed such bills.

200 teens skateboard toward contest victory

by JOHN FRANK

Most of them started on the kind of skateboards you can buy at the toy store down the street.

They rode them down driveways, down streets and down sidewalks, sometimes skinning an elbow or bruising a knee in a fall on the concrete.

But during the weekend, they hit the "big time," 200 teen-agers riding $100 skateboards, wearing helmets, gloves, and knee pads, trying to psych themselves up for the first-ever Chicago Open Skateboard Contest at the O'Hare Exposition Center, Rosemont.

"IN FREE-STYLE, you try to concentrate without looking like you're concentrating," Bob Keating Jr., 14, of 8916 Robin Dr., Des Plaines said Sunday, the final day of competition.

Keating entered the sport via the toy board route about a year and a half ago. He found he could not stop and advanced to better equipment and contests.

"It's just fun and I haven't gotten hurt yet," Keating said.

"I wiped out in Springfield and hurt my wrist, so now I wear a wrist band," Jim R. Sorenson, 14, of 5247 Gateshead North, Elk Grove Village said. The thought of another injury has not killed the skateboarding bug.

"I ALMOST GOT a concussion," said Dennis Kuta, 12, 221 Yarmont Rd., Elk Grove Village. "We were racing and I hit a stone." But the accident has not kept him from racing again.

"We practice mostly every day," he said of himself and three teammates from Elk Grove Village.

"I like the action, the fun of it," said Jerry VanMess, 13, of 1064 Cheltenham Rd., Elk Grove Village.

'Two years ago I got one board. It wasn't that good. Then I got another and starting doing 180s and 360s," VanMess said referring to turning tricks.

"I like the free-style and the ramps," said Keating as music blared in the background for one contestant. Loud rock music was played for all the skateboarders with some choosing their own pieces, but not Keating.

'I don't really listen to the music that much. I'm concentrating," he said.

KEATING'S FATHER, Bob Sr., was concentrating too.

"This is our first tournament," he said nervously. "We're looking forward to going a lot further," he said.

WHEN YOU mastered one, try two; that's the philosophy behind this trick performed by Tom Mangelsdorf, 18, of Fox Lake during the Chicago Open Skateboard Contest Saturday and Sunday in Rosemont. More than 200 youngsters competed.

Alien welfare abuse cited in report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Abuse of federal welfare payments by aliens in five states alone costs taxpayers more than $72 million a year, the General Accounting Office said Sunday.

The payments are not illegal under current law but occur mostly because Americans who sign affidavits that they will support the aliens as a condition of entry later back down from that pledge.

An aide to Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who released the report, explained: "What's really happening is the (alien) parents of many Americans are being brought in and the children consciously are signing affidavits of support knowing full well they will sign the parent up for welfare. The taxpayer comes out on the losing end of it."

AFTER 30 DAYS in the United States, aliens seeking permanent residence become eligible to receive $177.80 a month in Supplemental Security Income, a federal welfare program for the aged, the blind and the disabled.

In California, New York, Florida, New Jersey and Illinois — the five states surveyed by GAO because they suffered the worst abuse — more than 37,000 aliens collected $72.3 million in SSI payments in 1976.

The dollar amount is probably low because receipt of SSI payments generally makes an alien eligible for Medicaid benefits as well, Percy said.

Percy said he will introduce legislation requiring a five-year residency requirement for SSI eligibility and making sponsors' affidavits promising to support the aliens a legally enforceable contract.

Figures from the five states surveyed showed:

- In California, 12,027 aliens got $31.6 million.
- In Florida, 12,342 got $19.5 million.
- In New York, 6,444 got $11.3 million.
- In New Jersey, 3,718 got $5.4 million.
- In Illinois, 2,980 got $4.5 million.

GAO estimated about 4,450 newly arrived aliens were getting SSI payments in 20 other states but it could not provide statistically reliable breakdowns.

Town set for welcome, but Lillian doesn't show

- Farmer Tim Murphy fondled his pint of Guinness in the bar of Five Counties Hotel in New Ross, County, Wexford Ireland, and chuckled quietly to himself. "Sure, we would have loved to welcome the old lady," he said. "But we've had a heck of a hooley anyway." It appears an unknown hoaxer, posing as an executive of Bord Failte, Ireland's tourist body that helped organize Lillian Carter's Irish visit, telephoned town notables to tell them President Carter's mother was about to pay them a visit. The town flipped with excitement, the band quickly practiced and priests put on their Sunday sermon suits . . . alas, no Lillian. The town fathers finally checked with tourist officials and found out she was watching television in her Foxrock house.

He added, "It wasn't the pressure of the job that made me drink. Alcoholism is a disease."

O'Hare park lot worker strike seen

O'Hare Airport parking lot attendants will be going on strike in the next two weeks if the Allright Parking Co., which operates the airports lots and garage, doesn't come up with a new contract offer. The attendants voted Friday 50 to 1 to strike for higher wages and better working conditions when the present three-year contract expired Sunday at midnight, but must wait for strike authorization from their parent Teamsters Union before walking off. Starting pay is now $2.80 an hour with a maximum level of $4.40 an hour. The attendants, members of Teamsters Local 727, were asking for $6.50 an hour. Allright offered no increase in pay and extension of the present contract terms to June, 1978.

Man fires at cops, held on bond

A Bensenville man was being held Sunday in the DuPage County jail on a $53,000 bond after he fired four shots at Bensenville police officers responding to his call for help. Allen G. Young, 33, 237 Marion Ct., has been charged with attempted murder, armed violence, aggravated assault, unlawful use of a weapon and possession of a firearm without an identification card. Police said Young called officers to his house about a disturbance, but when police arrived, he refused to let them in, saying they were people who had come to kill him. He then fired four shots through the door with a .22 caliber rifle. The police did not return the fire. No one was hurt. Police called Martin Nash, an Addison Township police psychologist, to the scene. He talked to Young for about 30 minutes, and convinced him to surrender.

Two dead in apparent execution

Two men were found shot to death Sunday — victims of an apparent execution — in the bathroom of a North Side hotdog stand. Melvin Kanter, 51, owner of Mel's Red Hots, and Charles Duccion, 66, were shot in the head. Kanter was found with his hands bound by electrical cord, sitting on the bathroom toilet. Duccion was found lying on the floor, his hands untied. Homicide investigator Gerald J. Cygnar said the shootings were an apparent execution. Kanter was shot in the left ear and Duccion once behind the right ear, both shots from a .38-cal. revolver apparently from close range.

Crew pledges to polish planes here

You knew they had to polish it sometime. But to see them actually doing it, to see them grinding the elbow grease on 255,000 pounds of Boeing 707, is a sight to see.

And there's the boss, Mimi Banks, in charge of a crew of 60. She says it's just like making sure things are shined up back home.

"It's like polishing your furniture," says Mrs. Banks, shrugging her shoulders at the oddity of it all. "A little harder, maybe, and I don't polish furniture with a buffer, but it's the same idea. You want your furniture to shine, and you want your airplane to shine."

Mrs. Banks, 27, left an office job at American Airlines eight months ago, opting for work with a nearly all-male crew polishing gigantic jetliners. Last month she won a promotion. She now oversees 60 persons responsible for the polishing of two jets every night.

WORK BEGINS inside the cavernous American Airlines hangar around 9:30 p.m. On one side, a 707 is pulled inside, the doors close behind it and 27 workers start polishing. On the other side of the hangar, a 727 is pulled inside and 20 workers begin shining.

The crews work fast. One recent night, the jets were in Oklahoma and New Jersey as late as 6 p.m. Early the next morning they departed for New York and New Jersey, then the Caribbean.

The next night, two more jets needed polishing, and the next, two more. All told, the airline owns 257 airplanes, each of which is polished roughly every three months at airports in Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Boston and Tulsa.

Why did Mrs. Banks leave a clean, quiet job in an office and start polishing jetliners?

"IT WAS BORING. The same thing everyday. Day in, day out. And it was a small office, too confining. Here, this is entirely different. Everyone is assigned a part of the airplane and they're responsible for that part. This job is just as secure. It's different, and a lot more money."

Did she mind getting dirty?

"No, I rather enjoyed it. When you dress up for work, you don't get any thrill of dressing up when you go out on Friday night."

Mrs. Banks, the mother of two children, says she averages two to three hours of sleep in periods of 15 minutes to one-half hour.

She usually gets home from work about 7 a.m. when the kids are already up. Since one is preschool age, Mrs. Banks must stay awake all day long. She finally can catch a few winks about suppertime.

MRS. BANKS isn't the first woman to join an airplane-polishing crew. Laurie Gehrt, 22, of Bolingbrook broke the sex barrier one and one-half years ago. She is a trained mechanic, and is waiting for a job to open in the airline's mechanical department.

"It's awful," says Miss Gehrt, when asked what it's like to polish airplanes for a living. "I want to become a mechanic."

American Airlines is one of few airlines that polish their planes, and does so to prevent deterioration, says Arthur Jackson, airline spokesman in Chicago.

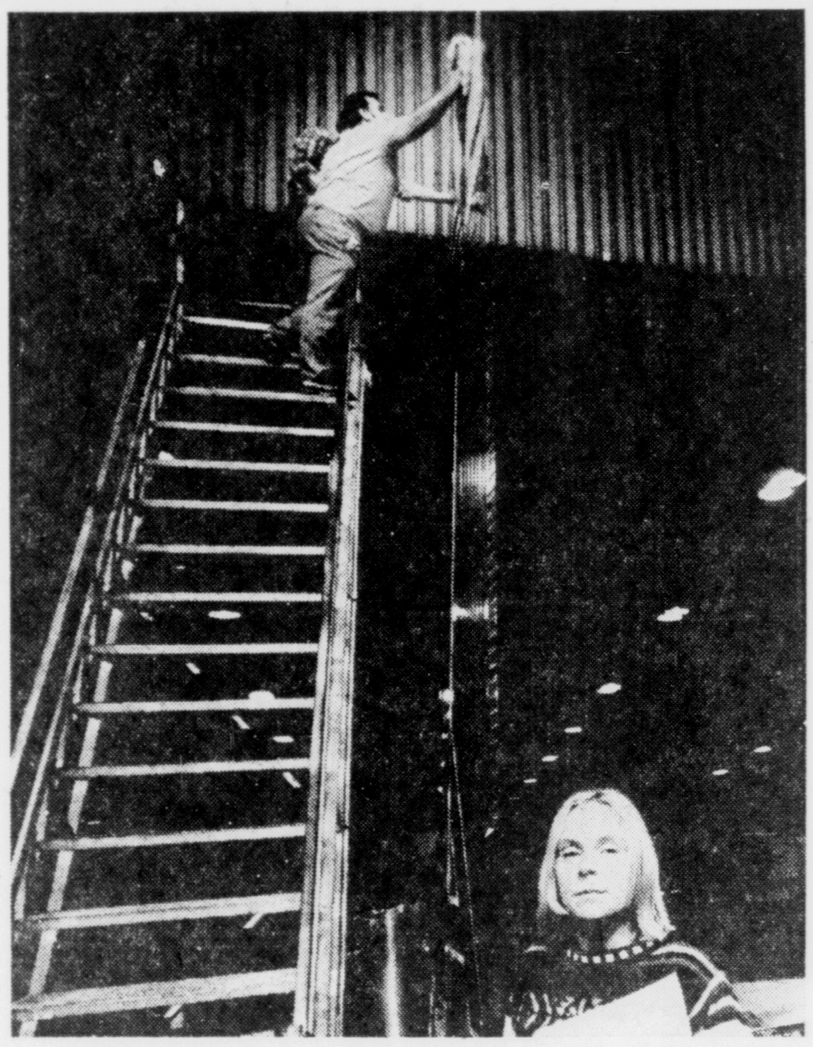
Some airlines paint their airplanes, a practice that demands much more fuel because of increased friction and weight.

"IF WE PAINTED our 257 airplanes," Jackson says, "we would use an additional 400,000 gallons of fuel per year. That would cost us about $1.5 million at the current price, which will soon go up."

The paint alone on a Boeing 747 weighs 697 pounds, Jackson says. On a DC-10 it weighs 390 pounds; on a 707, 163 pounds; and on a 727, 135 pounds. Surprisingly heavy weights for paint alone, but relatively light when compared with total jetliner weights well into the hundreds of thousands of pounds.

Big as the jetliners are, those who polish them look on their job as just another job.

Says one new worker on the crew, Peggy McAdam of Chicago: "It beats working in a department store."



EVEN THE TAIL wing gets polished, Mimi Banks sees to that. Mrs. Banks, 27, oversees a 60-person crew that polishes American Airlines' gigantic jetliners at O'Hare Airport. "It's like polishing your furniture," she says. "You want your airplane to shine just like your furniture.

Prairie farm project to be reviewed

Arlington Heights park district officials today will discuss a proposal from Ed Murnane & Associates to help secure financing for a historical prairie farm and garden.

Murnane's public relations firm has offered to investigate what state and federal grants may be available for the prairie farm project, as well as what private foundation or corporate donations may be available.

If Murnane's proposal is accepted, he also will prepare the necessary grant applications and prepare any brochures needed to describe the proposed prairie farm. Murnane said the cost to the park district would be a maximum of $3,000.

The park district's meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at 800 E. Falcon Dr.

THE PRAIRIE FARM development planned for about three years, is envisioned as a re-creation of a post-Civil War farm, complete with 100-year-old farm buildings, crops, an apple orchard and an orientation center. A $700,000 price tag has been put on the project.

The proposed site for the prairie farm is north of Golf Road at Belmont Avenue and Council Trail Road. The park district owns 10 acres there and has received a $100,000 grant from the Illinois Dept. of Conservation to put towards the purchase of an adjacent 5-acre site, which has been appraised at $200,000.

Guard admits to sleeping in Korea dynamite case

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — A security guard has admitted he fell asleep after drinking and left candles burning inside a dynamite-loaded freight car that exploded and killed at least 56 persons and injured more than 1,300, investigators said Sunday.

The huge blast Friday night leveled almost all buildings within a 1,000-yard radius of the rail station at Iri in central Korea, digging a crater nearly 50 feet deep and leaving more than 10,000 persons homeless.

Police said Shin Mu-il, 36, admitted he left the parked freight car filled with 33 tons of dynamite packed in wooden boxes to have a few drinks and fell asleep on his return without extinguishing the candles.

Investigators charged he was drunk.

OFFICIALS SAID he told them he awoke to find his quilt on fire and the freight car filled with fire and smoke. He said he ran from the car, which exploded three or four minutes later.

During initial police questioning, Shin denied any responsibility for the blast and said when he returned from dinner he found the railway car door open and saw fire spreading out of control.

Despite Shin's confession, government authorities said they sought corroborating evidence of his story and would continue to investigate "all possibilities."

SOME OFFICIALS earlier raised the possibility of sabotage by North Korean infiltrators.

"We should come to a conclusion after reveiwing the entire supply channel of explosives on a nationwide scale," said senior prosecutor Suh Jung-kak, director of the investigation.

Suh indicated a formal announcement on the cause of the blast would be made Monday.

Police said 56 persons were known dead in the expolsion 125 miles south of Seoul and more than 1,300 were injured, 290 of them seriously. Army engineers working with bulldozers Sunday found one body and pieces of others buried under tons of dirt in the 49-foot-deep, 40-yard-wide crater left by the blast.

Officials said the death toll could increase as rescue workers continue to search the ruins of the Iri railway station and surrounding areas.

The explosion, described by many as reminiscent of air bombings during the Korean War, devastated a large section of the city of 120,000, leaving more than 10,000 persons homeless in freezing weather.

The nation

Controlled natural gas prices sought

A consumers' coalition is asking the new Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to make sure "blackmail prices" are not charged for emergency natural gas supplies if shortages occur this winter. Spokesmen for the National Gas Consumers Coalition, comprised of consumer groups, union, electric cooperatives, farm organizations, state officials and members of Congress, announced plans Sunday to file a petition urging FERC to assure gas supplies at government-controlled prices.

The petition, to be filed Monday, asks FERC to stop gas producer practices they contend are keeping large supplies from reaching the national market at controlled prices. It says FERC should use its existing authority to prevent interstate gas producers from favoring intrastate markets, end large divisions of offshore gas to preferred customers and require producers to deliver all the gas they originally agreed to supply to pipelines.

Settlement reached in dock strike

A settlement was teached in the six-week long dock workers strike against container ship operations which has left $4 billion in goods piled up at ports from Maine to Texas. The tentative pact between the International Longshoremen's Association and the ocean carriers was announced by spokesmen for both sides in the labor dispute Sunday afternoon. Details of the new pact were not released pending notification of union members and industry officials.

Primary canal issue remains: Dole

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos' offer to resign does not remove the primary issue blocking Senate ratification of the new Panama Canal treaties. Torrijos toll a group of U.S. senators in Panama over the weekend he would end human rights violations in his country and, if necessary, resign in order to get the pact ratified. Dole, the unsuccessful 1967 Republican vice presidential nominee, said Torrijos is "purely and simply a dictator" in a country where there is no political freedom. But, when asked on CBS's "Face the Nation" program if Torrijos' offer to resign would influence treaty opponents, he replied: "I don't think so. He (Torrijos) may be a side issue, but he is not the primary issue in the Panama Canal ratification dispute."

The world

Terrorist's death called suicide

A team of West German doctors ruled Sunday that terrorist Ingrid Schubert, who was found hanged in her Munich prison cell, committed suicide, the Bavarian Ministry of Justice announced Sunday. "A post-mortem performed on Miss Schubert has established that there are no clues of outside interference in her death. It was a typical case of suicide by hanging," a ministry spokesman said. Miss Schubert, 32, a veteran member of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla band, was the fourth member of the terrorist gang found dead in prison this year. All were ruled suicides.

Firefighters to strike in Britain

The union leader of Britain's 35,000 firefighters said Sunday his members are nearly unanimous in their decision to strike on Monday. Home Secretary Merlyn Rees Sunday said a nationwide strike would be deplorable. Rees said: "I cannot believe that anyone would allow children's and old peoples' homes to burn down around their occupants." Fire Brigades Union chief Terry Parry said on the eve of his members' first walkout, "There are very few firemen who do not support the strike." Rees made no direct appeal to the firefighters to call off their strike.

Reagan takes swipes at Carter at luncheon

Calling President Carter a bureaucratic spendthrift, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan spoke during the weekend about the ills of the Democratic administration and a need for Republican unity before 2500 conservative Republicans at a luncheon in the Sheraton O'Hare Motor Hotel, Rosemont.

The program Saturday was sponsored by the Citizens for the Republic, a conservative Republican group launched by Reagan in 1976 after he lost his bid for the presidential nomination.

Reagan stressed party unity and attacked Carter's administration for what he called its "ultra-liberal and bumbling approach to politics." He accused Carter of breaking a campaign promise to reduce big-government bureaucracy in Washington.

"JIMMY CARTER promised he'd reduce the White House establishment," Reagan said. "But he has the largest and most inept White House staff in history.

"What we have in Washington is an administration that doeesn't know the difference between being a diplomat and being a doormat," he said.

On Carter's energy policies and his treatment of the Panama Canal issue, Reagan said the president is "completely disregarding the wishes of the American people."

Reagan said the Senate should reject the proposed Panama Canal treaty and seek what he called "constructive alternatives." He did not say, however, what these alternatives might be.

"President Carter's claim that the U.S. will have the permanent right to defend the neutrality of the canal from any threat, means little if American forces don't have the capacity to do so," He said this "capacity," as well as U.S. sovereignty over the Canal, would be lost if a treaty were signed.

Reagan also said Carter's concern for energy "is only half what it should be.

"Carter's energy plans are leading to total nationalization of our energy sources," he said.

First, some straight talk — Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise.

Why Insulspray? — In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible.

What is Insulspray? — Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.

How is Insulspray installed? — Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day. It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.

What are the advantages? — Your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

Once-outspoken Amin now shuns the spotlight

by RAYMOND WILKINSON

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — God may be telling Idi Amin Dada something he doesn't want to hear.

"Big Daddy" has led his national trough nearly seven years of one of the most tumultuous and bloody dictatorships in African history, declaring his respect and fear only for Allah.

The hulking, 6-foot-3, 250-pound former heavy-weight boxer has survived at least 13 assassination and coup attempts. But until recent months he mostly scorned bodyguards, declaring:

"I am not afraid to die because God has told me exactly when and how this will happen."

Perhaps he has now received a whisper from on high.

AMIN NOW has severely curtailed his highly visible visits to Kampala, skulking in well-guarded compounds around the capital.

He no longer drives his Citrogen-Maserati alone through Kampala, stopping to pummel the hands of startled citizens. Nor does he take his favorite solitary dips in the kidney-shaped International Hotel pool on "Gun Hill."

When he attends public functions now, Amin is closely guarded by his mubian "strike force" bodyguards. His appearances often are total surprises, or announced at very short notice.

Amin shuns the dangers of the capital, preferring now to stay at his lodge at Cape Town Villas overlooking Lake Victoria or at the imposing nearby Entebbe Statehouse.

He frequently uses a motor launch between Capte Town and Entebbe, avoiding the main Kampala-Entebbe road, which was the scene of the latest assassination attempt against him in June.

DIPLOMATS PRESENTING their credentials are told only at the last moment at which of several locations the ceremony will be held.

"Amin may not exactly be running scared," one diplomat said, "but he is certainly much more cautious."

At Entebbe, the former colonial administrative capital of Uganda, all street lights are doused in the evening for security reasons. Vehicles parked near the statehouse are immediately towed away.

Few persons move around the darkened streets when Amin is in residence.

Perhaps more than any current national leader, and despite his appalling record, Amin retains the ability not only to shock and horrify a bemused world but also to titillate and amuse.

A spellbound world audience earlier this year followed fascinated as Amin announced he would gate-crash the Commonwealth conference in London, and then promptly dropped out of sight.

DESPITE AN official Irish story at one point that Amin's aircraft was circling Dublin, and another official Radio Uganda announcement that he had stolen secretly into the British capital, Amin never left Uganda.

He further tweaked the British lion when he declared himself "conqueror of the British empire" — a title even other African leaders have adopted in addressing Amin.

However, Amin's earlier image as a "gentle giant" has long since failed to hide the rape of Uganda under a rule that began so promisingly in a bloodless military coup in January 1971.

At least 100,000 persons, possibly as many as a quarter of a million, have been murdered or disappeared. They included cabinet ministers, justices, top civil servants and army officers.

In February, the late Anglican archbishop of Uganda, the Rt. Rev. Janani Luwum, and two cabinet ministers, Erinayo Dryema and Charles Oboth-Dfumbi, were murdered after being accused of plotting to overthrow Amin.

"THEY DIDN'T even try particularly hard to rig an effective 'accident' to explain the deaths," a diplomat here said. "It was simply a brutal warning to the Ugandan people. Amin didn't care about the reaction of the world community."

Five Anglican bishops and an assistant bishop — more than one-third of the church hierarchy — subsequently fled Uganda as a fresh wave of terror was visited on the country.

Sources here said perhaps 5,000 persons were slaughtered this year, many of them from death lists carried by Amin's killer squad, the State Research Bureau. They dismissed as exaggerated some published reports that tens of thousands of persons were slaughtered in a campaign bordering on genocide.

Luwum's body was buried hastily and in secret, apparently to hide the bullet marks on his body.

AMIN WAS BORN some 50 years ago in Koboko Country, a member of the 50,000-strong Kakwa tribe. He spent his early life tending the family goats in the harsh West Nile district and then joined Britain's King African Rifles in his teens.

He rose through the ranks, developing a taste for boxing, swimming and rugby and picked up the basics of English, Swahili and several dialects, all of which he uses during his speeches.

"Idi was a splendid chap," observed one of his former British commanders, "though a bit short on the gray matter."

That handicap notwithstanding, he quickly became army commander after independence in 1962 and used that position as a springboard to eventually overthrow Obote when his own career appeared in jeopardy.

'Business' is down, Ugandan economy up

ters of the military police.

Guards in thick khaki shorts and shirts and red hats lounge at the entrance. A few yards from the entrance, adjacent to the main road, are the interrogation center and cells — a long, low building, with narrow slit windows set high in the walls.

Makindye is possibly the most feared and infamous place in all of Uganda.

Hundreds and possibly thousands of victims have been killed in Makindye's cells, reportedly beaten to death with hammers or slaughtered by other gruesome means.

A FEW LUCKY prisoners were able to buy themselves out — their "fee" carefully calculated by the guards to match the seriousness of the alleged crime.

But Makindye and the headquarters of Amin's dreaded State Research Bureau — another nondescript compound overlooking a pleasant valley near the country's major hotel, the International — are doing slow business these days.

"Things have quieted down considerably since June," one diplomat said, "though there are these occasional incidents such as the one currently at Masaka," southwest of the capital.

A resident living near Makindye said, "We haven't heard many screams for several months from Makindye. Business has apparently dropped off."

The slight easing of tension is noticeable in other small ways.

Ugandans avoid foreigners, their eyes following a stranger suspiciously, but more and more they are venturing out cautiously in the evenings, avoiding the obvious trouble spots such as soldiers' bars and restricting themselves to neighborhood drinking centers.

FOREIGN RESIDENTS said they have no trouble at all in moving freely about the city center, although autos are still hijacked occasionally at gunpoint.

There are virtually no troops in uniform in Kampala itself. Roadblocks set up in June after the latest attempt on Amin's life have been quickly dismantled, and the soldiers returned to their barracks.

If the security situation has eased slightly in Uganda, so has the economic picture.

Ninety-five per cent of the country's people are subsistence farmers. They were only slightly affected by Amin's catastrophic decision in 1972 to expel the 40,000 Asian businessmen who controlled the country's economy.

BUT AS THE economy lurched toward paralysis, food in the cities and towns dried up, the beer ran out, buses and autos were abandoned for lack of spare parts and even salt, locally produced, was virtually unobtainable.

That situation now has changed.

Coffee production, which accounts for 95 per cent of Uganda's foreign earnings, dropped by 30 per cent last year, and of that reduced production, 20 per cent was smuggled across the border into neighboring Kenya.

Even so, skyrocketing world coffee prices filled Uganda's coffers to levels

Pounds slide away

Clients entranced with success

Ann Baker slipped off her sandals. Smiling, she settled back in the reclining chair and closed her eyes.

She was already 36 pounds lighter than the first day she visited the sunny, plant-filled room seven weeks ago.

In a waiting room outside, Greg Loesch and Jean Manella swapped stories about how great it is to be free of the urge to light one cigaret after another.

Mrs. Manella also talked proudly of having had two teeth extracted last week without pain killers.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Baker was "floating" as Arthur Bey told her to relax each part of her body "as the clear, sweet anesthesia flows into your lungs."

Bey's face was intent as he watched his client. Talking into his tape recorder, he steadily lowered and slowed his voice as he coached Mrs. Baker "deeper and deeper" into a trance.

The 30-year-old clinical hypnotist later would walk Mrs. Baker through an imaginary field where, in a clear pool, she would see herself "as the woman you want to be."

Bey also would describe her new eating plan. "After just a few bites you will feel absolutely stuffed and satisfied as if you have just had a huge Thanksgiving dinner and couldn't eat another bite."

Mrs. Baker shook her head and grimaced at the word "candy," which Bey said would "nauseate and disgust" her.

Her mouth puckered and twisted when the hypnotist said potato chips are "sickeningly salty, pasty and bland and will always leave the taste of globules of fat in your mouth."

Since Bey opened his clinical hypnosis office in Schaumburg 10 months ago, he said he's had a high degree of success with weight loss clients.

And he knows the problem first hand. In fact, it was Bey's loss of 100 pounds during six months of hypnosis that turned him away from a restaurant management career and prompted him to enroll in a two-year program at Denver's American College of Clinical Hypnosis.

"The very first time I was hypnotized I released a lot of tension and it's been a different life since then," Bey said.

But his work is not limited to weight control.

Bey's clients range from persons having marital or sexual problems to students who want to improve their grades to those who want to do a better job at work.

And the hypnotist talks of successes being achieved in breast enlargement, though he has not yet gone into that specialty.

He boasts of quick accomplishments with people like Loesch and Mrs. Manella who conquered their smoking habit in less that five days of treatment.

"I go around bragging about what happened to me," said the 27-year-old Loesch, who works for a Barrington real estate developer whom Bey is treating for weight loss.

When Loesch came to Bey in January he was smoking more than two packs a day.

"I never touched a cigaret after the first session and by the end of the third day I had absolutely lost all desire to smoke," he said.

Loesch said he believes Bey's $275 five-day smoking program is well worth the money.

"I think about all the money I'm going to save this year because of it," he said.

Mrs. Manella said she took a lot of flak from her family when she decided to see Bey.

"They were giving it to me not only about the expense but because I had tried every way possible to quit (smoking) and they didn't believe this would work either," she said.

But it did work for her. So well in fact, that after the third day Bey decided to attack Mrs. Manella's fear of "needles and dentists."

That worked, too. She proudly tells of the recent tooth extraction without anesthetic.

"I put myself under by playing Art's tape after I sat down in the dental chair."

Ironically, it was Mrs. Manella's dentist who referred her to Bey "because he kept complaining about how horribly dirty my teeth were from the tobacco."

Loesch, Mrs. Manella and Mrs. Baker describe the state of trance as a floating, light feeling. They awake totally rested. To Loesch it is "feeling that I am in and out of contact with the world at the same time."

But Mrs. Baker admits she was skeptical. "The first time I wasn't positive I had been under because I wasn't stretched out stiff between two chairs," she said.

Bey said he believes anyone can be hypnotized, but some subjects are "easier" than others.

"A person has to have the desire to do something against his own will while hypnotized.

"Hypnotists are not unscrupulous people who make others their complete slaves while in a trance," he said.

And weight loss clients' physical conditions are "checked out" with their physicians before Bey will begin treatment.

"I have had the experience of some very surprised doctors contacting me when their patients have come in for a check up minus 30 or so pounds," he said.

Bey's ultimate hope is to convince Schaumburg Township government to provide some financial assistance for a psychotherapy program he would like to offer to persons with limited income.

"My idea is to make the service available to people on a sliding fee scale," he said.

Iran not seeking oil price hike, U.S. official says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Iran has assured the United States it will not push for an increase in world oil prices at this time, an administration source said Sunday.

"That doesn't necessarily mean they'll fight it (a price increase)," the source said. "But at least they won't be out looking for it either."

Iran, which in the past has spearheaded efforts to raise the price of oil on the world market, issued its pledge in advance of next month's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Caracas, Venezuela.

The subject is expected to be discussed when President Carter meets Tuesday with Iranian Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi in a session that has drawn the ire of Iranian groups in the United States.

THE TWO LEADERS also are likely to discuss arms sales, particularly whether the United States will proceed with the sale of 140 F-16 fighter-bombers to Iran.

The shah's oil stance may be related to hopes of improving Iran's chances of receiving approval for its request on military purchases, which during the last fiscal year, was put at more than $5 billion.

The shah's impending visit, opposed by groups that say he violates human rights, was protested Sunday outside the church Carter attended, and there also was a demonstration against the neutron bomb.

Carter smiled and chatted with Pastor Charles Trentham of the First Baptist Church as the protestors chanted, but he did not acknowledge or comment on their presence.

The Iranian demonstrators were a prelude to a planned two-day protest slated to begin when the shah meets with Carter on Tuesday.

AT LEAST FIVE flights to Washington have been chartered by the Assyrian Heritage Foundation from Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas and Chicago. Last week, student activists carried signs during rush hour urging participation in a two-day demonstration.

The opponenets claim the Iranian government has been guilty of brutal violations of human rights. The Iranian Foreign Ministry, meanwhile, has labeled the protestors "criminals and anarchists."

The bomb demonstrators chanted "Neutron bombs are a sin" as they held a long banner proclaiming that "even to consider neutron bombs is evil."

There were no incidents inside the church.

Last month, protestors disrupted a service attended by the President to object to the potential deployment of the neutron bomb — a weapon designed to kill humans, while inflicting minimal property damage. Five persons were arrested.

Does Israel have too many arms?

by JIM ANDERSON
News Analysis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rocketing of an Israeli settlement by Palestinians and the massive retaliation by Israeli planes in the past week bolster claims made by both sides.

The Israelis say the rocket attack on the settlement in northern Israel adds fuel to their argument against establishment of a Palestinian state in the West Bank.

"If there were to be a Palestinian state in the West Bank, those rockets could reach Ben-Gurion International airport, and close down the main road network of Israel," opposition party leader Shimon Peres told reporters in Washington.

A PALESTINIAN homeland in the West Bank would be a sanctuary for terrorists, he said, "a dissatisfied state within easy range of Israel's population centers. It wouldn't be an answer. It would be the beginning of the problem."

On the other hand, retaliatory Israeli air raids which flattened several Lebanese villages and left more than 100 dead may be pointed to in support of the Arab argument that Israel now has an overwhelming military advantage in the Middle East — exceeding the needs of legitimate self-defense.

In an analysis for Army and Navy Journal, former Pentagon intelligence official Anthony Cordesman said Israel "is a militaristic state whose military buildup has gone far beyond the requirements of defense."

He continued: "The United States may no longer be supplying an Israel whose military strength would lead to Israeli willingness to compromise for peace," he said.

"THE UNITED States may find itself tied to an ally which will use military forces in a preemptive attempt to settle the PLO problem, or to destroy Arab military forces while they are weak."

The article, which has triggered protests from American Jewish organizations and started an investigation into possible misuse of classified information, said Israel now has a 30-day supply of ammunition. At the time of the 1973 war, Israel had only a few days worth. The supply of ammunition to Israel has a direct bearing on U.S. ability to influence, or stop, fighting in the Middle East.

The swift and thorough Israeli retaliation in southern Lebanon backed up a recent statement by Israeli Chief of Staff Mordecai Gur: "If another war breaks out between the Arab states and Israel, we must ensure that our victory is fast and decisive, so that the whole world knows who won."

Israeli leaders dubious about Sadat talks proposal

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Government leaders Sunday said they were dubious about Anwar Sadat's suggestion that a U.S. professor represent Palestinians at Middle East peace talks, and invited the Egyptian president to name names.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin avoided the jousting over details for a Geneva conference, but said he would welcome a visit to Jerusalem by Sadat. He said Israel and Egypt are "exchanging statements" on such a trip, "politely and with mutual honor."

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Israel would accept no negotiator with open ties to the Palestine Liberation Organization. His statements appeared to oppose the latest Egyptian proposal, but Israeli diplomats said it was not an outright rejection.

Sadat named no particular American in his proposal Saturday, but Dayan told the weekly Israeli cabinet meeting: "If he is known as a PLO man or is representing them, Israel will not agree to his participation even if he is a professor."

Patient care key in hospital fight

Doctors at Cook County Hospital are again threatening to strike over their demands for a new contract.

The House Staff Association, which represents about 390 physicians, 85 per cent of the doctors at County, is seeking a 7 per cent pay increase.

But most of the association's contract demands this time are directed toward improving patient care at the hospital, a goal which deserves support.

Last Monday doctors staged a work speed up in the emergency room to focus attention on the long wait patients face before they see a doctor — waits up to three, six or even eight hours.

Delays like this are intolerable to the doctors and should be equally unacceptable to the Health and Hospitals Governing Commission which runs county hospital and is currently bargaining with the House Staff Association.

County hospital is a tax-supported institution. Property owners in Cook County are currently paying 22 cents per $100 assessed valuation toward the operation of Cook County, Cermak and Oak Lawn hospitals.

Improved patient care will cost money. It might add a penny or two to the county tax rate, but first the hospital should try some old-fashioned belt tightening in non-medical areas of the hospital's operation.

Members of the Cook County Board, who each year approve the bottom line but not the itemized expenditures in the hospital's budget, have grumbled in years past about "fat" in the hospital budget and inefficient management.

Most of the patients at Cook County Hospital are poor. It is the doctor of last resort. And we cannot fault those physicians who want to do the very best for their patients.

As in any contract negotiations, there has got to be room for compromise between the doctors and the governing board. But we hope that both sides agree that the last place to compromise is in the care that sick and injured people receive at Cook County Hospital.

The week to visit schools

So what have you done for education lately? Helped your kid with his homework? Made another payment on your college loan? Dressed up as Ho-Ho the clown for the PTA fun fair?

If you haven't been doing your bit for education, now is the perfect time to start. It's American Education Week, and local schools are going out of their way to entice you into their buildings to show you what today's education is all about.

Some students are even going on the road — Streamwood's Greenbrook School children will be trying to teach us old folks about metrics in an "Annie Get Your Meter Stick" stage show at Woodfield Friday. River Trails Dist. 26 students are serenading Randhurst shoppers today and teaching them about oceanography and art.

If you don't have any school-age children, all the more reason to stop in at a school to see what's going on. The biggest chunk of your local tax dollars goes to the schools — you should know what they're doing in them.

So take a little time out this week for formal education. Ask your children how they're being taught to multiply. Find out what replaced Dick and Jane. Go attend a girls sporting event — they've come a long way — thanks to new federal discrimination laws.

And if you have a little time on your hands, ask about being a volunteer. The schools don't just need your tax dollar — they need you too.

Tomorrow . . .

Our comments on the new promotion policy in Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59.

Oregon's governor's race dominated by charisma

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

PORTLAND, Ore. — He now lives and works here, but virtually every politician in Salem, the state capital nestled in the Willamette Valley 50 miles to the south, is both haunted by his memory and intrigued by the possibility that he may soon seek to return there.

The umbiquitous ghost of Salem politics is Thomas W. McCall, elected governor of Oregon in 1966 and reelected in 1970. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that he would still be state executive were it not for a constitutional limitation of two consecutive four-year terms.

But there is no prohibition on nonconsecutive terms, and all of Oregon stands poised for the expected announcement that he will again run for governor next year. "Tom McCall is to Oregon as Queen Elizabeth is to England," says one astute observer. "You almost never hear any criticism."

THE MAN WHOSE political career is most directly threatened by that potential challenge is Gov. Robert W. Straub, an affable, dedicated and exceptionally forthright politician who was elected in 1974 and makes no secret of his desire for a second term.

McCall is a Republican and Straub is a Democrat, but that distinction hardly matters in a state where progressive Republicans such as McCall and Sens. Mark Hatfield and Robert Packwood invariably talk, act and vote like moderate Democrats.

Oregon prides itself on having an exceptionally enlightened electorate whose favor is swayed far more often by issues than by peronalities. But in this case, both men share a similar approach to governing the state.

The ideological differences between McCall and Straub are so blurred and trivial that the only factor of any apparent significance is McCall's oft-cited charismatic personality.

NO LESS AN authority on the subject than Straub acknowledges his liabilities in that regard. In a recent interview with the Oregon Statesman, the unusually candid governor explained:

"People make inevitable comparisons between us. He's colorful, articulate and dramatic. I'm more subdued, not flashy. He's more lovable than I am. He just is.

"I don't begrudge it in him. I can't be him. I'm old enough to know that we have to live with what we are. I wish I were a lot glibber and smoother and more urbane looking."

There is unanimous agreement here that Straub has suffered through what one politician describes as "three years of the worst public relations north of San Clemente."

BUT STRAUB AND his aides insist that his accomplishments stand in sharp contrast with that poor image. To offset McCall's edge in personality, the governor and his staff already are considering a high-risk campaign to portray Straub's most criticized trait — his easy-going, almost lackadaisical manner — as an asset rather than a liability.

At the same time, the political discussions with Straub's staff are increasingly riddled with ominous references to the possibility of returning to an "imperial" governorship and self-serving contrasts between McCall's "theater" and Straub's "substance."

But Straub is painfully aware of a newspaper poll earlier this year, conducted by the Oregonian here, that showed him trailing McCall by a 53-28 margin (with 19 per cent undecided) in a statewide voter preference survey.

THE GOVERNOR is anxiously searching for the proper set of circumstances that will allow him to demonstrate the dynamic leadership qualities so often ascribed to McCall. "The kind of events haven't come along to allow me something to do," he says ruefully. "I can't dummy something up."

McCall, meanwhile is keeping his own counsel. Some think he'll run as an independent instead of a Republican. Others believe he will pass up the race entirely. But if he enters, the Oregon gubernatorial race next year undoubtedly will attract national attention.

'Breeder reactor's a bomb maker'

Fence post

letters to the editor

Letters must be signed, and no letters will be published anonymously. Letters are subject to condensation, and a maximum length of 300 words is recommended. Direct your mail to the Fence post, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

The word is out. The Clinch River Breeder Reactor is a bomb and a bomb maker.

Congress was told in 1973 that the Clinch River plant would cost $700 million. The estimate today is $2.2 billion: a billion dollar-plus overrun. An expensive taxpayers' subsidy to the already highly socialized nuclear industry, the Clinch River project takes much needed funds away from safer energy sources.

Worse yet, the Clinch River Breeder produces plutonium — the key ingredient in nuclear weapons. If we proceed with the breeder, our civil liberties will be threatened. Federal agencies have already discussed the need for a specially-trained and organized police force whose primary responsibilities would be to prevent the diversion, theft, abuse and misuse of plutonium. We will be well on our way to a police state.

If the Clinch River prototype is accepted, we can expect a future with hundreds of plutonium-producing reactors across the country. Other states will add to the radioactive wastes they now truck to Illinois for disposal at Morris and Sheffield. And the citizens of Illinois and their children can guard these deadly dumps with their lives and their health for generations to come.

The President has vetoed the Clinch River Breeder and the members of the Pollution and Environmental Problems applaud his courageous stand. We urge you to ask your representatives in Congress to sustain his veto so Illinois citizens and their descendants can have a future.

'Pres. Lahti crucified by board'

Like many of the taxpayers in this area we have been contributing to Harper College and asking no questions. Some haven't even bothered to vote for board members since we didn't suppose it mattered.

Now there are headlines shouting at us from all of the papers and we should demand to know the whole story.

The majority of the board wanted to fire the president. But wait a minute! Three were elected only last spring. The only member who has sat on the board since the beginning has confidence in the administrator. Are some being brainwashed and by whom?

We attended the meeting when the Tadlock report was made public. A considerable portion of it dealt with the growth of the college and its outstanding rating not just in this area but in the country. It didn't attain this standing without sound, professional expertise.

A well-qualified educator with a doctor's degree came 12 years ago to work in our interests. Isn't he now being needlessly and unmercifully crucified? Doesn't he deserve better from a board who supposedly represents us?

Shark's fin doesn't tempt his appetite

The Dragon Inn crouches on a big rock halfway between Kowloon and Lo Wu. At twilight it looks like an old movie set. There is a crunchy curving driveway, a whiff of jasmine, and the winking lights of Hong Kong in the bottom of a rice bowl.

We declined the invitation. It is the habit of Chinese to giggle when they are pleased, amused, offended or embarrassed. Chen insisted. "You will like it," he said in chop-chop English. F. Fong giggled. He sells slim dresses to fat Americans.

"I am a difficult man," I said in pidgin English. "Meat and potatoes. There are many American foods I will not eat. Your guest will disappoint you." They glanced at Kelly. She made a mock bow.

"WE WILL GO," she said. "We are honored." Chen is not likable. He uses expression like "Boy, he's sharp" in the wrong place. When he visits America, he resents being searched "like a criminal." He fits American men with cheap silk suits and flirts with their wives.

We sat around a table for eight, a table which in the center had a lazy Susan and a hole about eight inches in diameter in its center. Jack and Dorothy Sullivan were with us. Ladies are willing to experiment in exotic foods; men are grim and defensive.

Dragon Inn has an orange tile roof and a curving top beam. It hangs over the darkening bay like a frightened fledgling. It has no side walls. All of the tables were occupied by rich Chinese families. The waiters shuffled in slippers and loose pantaloons.

There would be no chop suey in this place. No chow mein. No egg rolls. The phrases induced giggles. Softly, I told Fong I would not eat braised elephant trunk, rabbit intestines, shark fin soup or charred deer tail. "Peacock tongue?" he said hopefully.

SULLIVAN prepared to fast. On the far side of the restaurant, a big rectangular tank held fish. There were grouper, yellowtail, a flat fish with mandarin whiskers, and plump goldfish. The diner picks one. The chef spears the fish and carries him, protesting and bleeding, to the kitchen.

A Chinese dinner is 60 per cent conversation, 40 per cent food. It is a sign of status to eat the unusual, to claw one's way from the rice bowl. Each course was served family style, on the center of the Lazy Susan. I asked Chen if food ever fell into that round hole.

He laughed hysterically. So did Fong. "I tell you about that hole," he said, wiping his eyes. He didn't. The waiters passed ornamental ivory chopsticks. Kelly does well with them. Sullivan said he wanted a knife and fork or he wouldn't play.

The shark's fin soup looked like shredded gray chicken and noodles. It is a sign of Oriental appreciation to make noise while eating. There is a lot of noisy supping, windy sighs and smacking of lips. The soup sold for 10 Hong Kong dollars a serving — about $1.60.

NEXT CAME "Fried Sliced Chicken Paper Wrapped." It came in oiled paper the size of a change purse. Eating it is like snapping at a diamond with eyebrow tweezers in a coal mine. I skipped the stewed pigeon.

Skipping became important. The Orientals watched me and giggled. The next course was duck's feet and chuk sang. The following one looked good and tasted good until Fong, a man who is so intimate with a measuring tape that he should be arrested, told me it was grouper head.

"What happened to the rest of the fish?" I said. A lady from Arkansas said, "Mr. Chen, you come to our town and we'll serve you collard greens." "Ah, ye-e-e-s," he said, not understanding. There were so many courses, Pig's kidney and bamboo shoot. Braised ox tripe.

Chen laughed. "You see? It's beautiful. This real Chinese." Next was chicken blood soup. My lips remained sealed. Chen said that if I wanted a piece of truly tender fish, he would order the chef to stroke it to death with a peacock fan.

"What is that hole in the table?" I said. Chen said, "Dessert." Fong shook his head. "You would not like it. Try the lotus seed cream." Thank you, no, I said.

"PLEASE," KELLY said, "what dessert in the middle of the table?" Chen smiled. "Look underneath," he said. We pushed our chairs away. Underneath was a tiny wooden highchair with straps. "So" I said.

Chen shrugged. He showed a wooden mallet. "Put simian monkey is chair," he said. "Strap him in. Hit his head with mallet. Break skull. Eat monkey brains."

"What" Kelly said. "While he's still thinking?" . . .

Tarnished Carter image to get needed polishing from Powell

Charles B. Seib

Jody Powell, who as White House press secretary is keeper of the Carter image, has decided he must do a better job.

He told a reporter for Newsday in Long Island, New York recently he is going to spend less time briefing the regulars of the White House press corps and more time helping the administration get its message across. Apparently those tasks are not synonymous.

That is probably a good idea. In addition to the publicized strains between White House and Capitol Hill and the resulting legislative shambles, a couple of recent occurrences have tarnished the presidential image.

BOTH OF THEM center around Richard Helms, the former CIA Director who performed the remarkable feat of conceding that he was less than truthful under oath and at the same time taking a hero's bow.

That was a good trick on Helms' part, but it left the Carter folks, who engineered the whole deal, in the position of having let an erring big shot off with a wrist slap. And it was done in a way that caused reporters to mutter darkly about their remembrances of things past.

Contrary to normal practice, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and his aides kept the charges against Helms sealed until the deal was consummated. Also contrary to normal practice, they made sure that no reporters would be in the courtroom when Helms copped his plea.

Inconveniencing the press is far from the worst Washington sin. But the whole performance had an under-the-table flavor that was not quite harmonious with the image of an open administration. Beyond that, the Helms case caused another little incident that gave the President's press people some uneasy moments.

IN SEPTEMBER CARTER was asked about the case and how he was dealing with it. He pleaded ignorance, saying that Bell had not consulted with him on it.

"I am familiar with it through reading in the press," he said, adding: "I have no way to know yet the seriousness of the offense with which he will be charged (the White House later changed that to 'may be charged')."

When he got the information, he said, he would certainly talk to the attorney general.

But after the Helms deal was closed, Bell told reporters he had met with the President and others on the case in the White House on July 25. At that meeting, he said, he received a presidential okay to look into plea bargaining.

THE CONTRADICTION resulted in a page one headline in the Boston Globe the next morning declaring "Carter, Bell Statements at Odds." That, in turn, set off a long hassle — eleven transcript pages of it — between reporters and Deputy Press Sec. Rex Granum at the White House.

Granum gave the same explanation he had given the Globe: Carter thought the press knew about the July 25 meeting. What he meant in his news conference response was that there had been no meeting since then.

Why did he think that? Well, said Granum, Jody Powell had "a very strong recollection" that he told some reporters about the July meeting. Powell has not said who those reporters were, and none has come forward.

Despite the long grilling of Granum, the contradiction got limited attention except for the splash in Boston. If the President did fudge on his campaign promise not to lie, he pretty well got away with it.

THERE IS MORE involved here than some out-of-joint journalistic noses. Which brings us back to Powell's image-repairing mission. Amplifying the Newsday story, Powell told a Washington Post reporter that one of the things he is going to do is pay more attention to the Washington columnists who comment on politics and public affairs.

In recent weeks they have been depicting an administration in disarray and even nibbling at the idea of a one-term President. Powell thinks they need to be better informed on what is going on in the White House, and that he is the man to do the job.

Well, the columnists are wooable (history has shown that they respond to a little bit of high-level love) and they are worth wooing. They not only influence the public and each other, but they also influence in a subtle way the hard-news reporters whose work appears on front pages and on the news broadcasts. By their comments, they help set the Washington news agenda, meaning what the press is particularly interested in at any given moment.

BUT THERE IS a pitfall for Powell here. The Helms case has identified Carter and his Good Ole Boys with the old-line Washington establishment as surely as if they all had started to hit the Georgetown party circuit. And Carter's confusing action, at least, on his involvement in the early Helms discussion had a stalish Washington smell.

The journalistic movers and shakers Powell intends to court are for the most part establishment people. He faces the job of courting them without further identifying the administration with what the President ran against.

In any case, here is a tip for customers of the news business: Watch your favorite Washington column. See if the President who has been floundering suddenly begins to catch on and function in a statesmanlike fashion.

If that happens, send a congratulatory note to Jody Powell.

Congress seeks way out of outside income limit

by GENE BERNHARDT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the public pressure for reform behind them, some House members are restless over what they consider were excesses they were forced to swallow early this year. Now, they are looking for a way out.

The single reform that really sticks in the legislative craw is that $8,625-a-year limit on certain outside income that was in the package of reforms approved last March.

A search is earnestly under way on how to undo that little item before it goes into effect in January 1979 to coincide with the new 96th Congress.

THE WAYNE Hays-Elizabeth Ray scandal of the summer of 1976 was still fresh when the current Congress organized in January and the South Korean bribe scandal was blossoming. On top of that, Congress accepted that $12,900-a-year pay raise in March with nary a vote until some months later.

So it was that members believed they had to do something to clean up their act and amid much grumbling the reforms were passed.

Besides the income limit, there were such items as public disclosure of their financial holdings, a ban on lame duck members taking taxpayer financed junkets and abolition of the right to accumulate the annual $2,000-a-year stationery allowance and take it with them when they retired.

The Commission on Administrative Review, with Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., as chairman, thought up those reforms and what Congress does Congress can repeal.

THE HOUSE, ON Oct. 31, voted to extend the life of the Select Committee on Ethics, created into statutory law those reforms needing it. As originally approved, the reforms were changes in House rules that do not have the effect of law.

Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn., said on Oct. 31, "I think there should be some mechanism for reconsideration of some of the provisions of the Obey Commission proposal."

"This member will investigate every avenue where we might have the ability and the opportunity to reevaluate what this House did earlier in this session," said Quillen.

Just what "some of the provisions" were that Quillen had in mind were not enunciated but members privately are grumping about that limit on outside income. It is 15 per cent of their $57,500-a-year congressional pay but it has certain exemptions for so-called "unearned income," such as that deriving from stocks.

THE FINANCIAL disclosure provision went into effect Oct. 1, requiring members to start preparing records then for filing and public inspection by April 30, 1978, with filings required every three months thereafter.

The reports must show the source of any income more than $100, gifts with a value of $100 or more, property holdings that include stocks and bonds more than $1,000, liabilities more than $2,500 and property transactions that exceed $1,000.

Speaker Thomas O'Neill said recently that one member, whom he would not identify, told of his concern over the financial disclosure statements.

"He said he did not mind that the public would see that he was a wealthy man but he was sincerely concerned that it would subject his children, his wife and perhaps himself to the possibility of kidnaping," said O'Neill.

The outside income limitation, however, has no such humanitarian concern but it's a safe bet that it will be the first of the reforms of 1977 to go by the board in 1978.

Free trade, job protection on firing line

by HARRY B. ELLIS

The Carter administration, with labor and industry nipping at its heels, is groping for a way to preserve free trade and still protect American workers from job loss because of imports.

A formula being thrashed out for steel imports, officials say, has broad implications for other products and is a point of controversy within the administration.

Under the formula a "reference price" for each category of steel import would be set unilaterally by the United States, based on the production cost of the most efficient producer — namely the Japanese.

Included in the reference price, in addition to production costs, would be transportation costs plus a reasonable degree of profit, though less, says one key official, than the 8 per cent sometimes mentioned.

Foreign steel could be priced 5 per cent below the reference price without penalty. A selling price lower than that would trigger automatic penalties in the form of additional U.S. duties.

President Carter, faced with rising unemployment in the U.S. steel industry and demands for import barriers, shortly will decide whether the reference price system should be at the core of a program to help depressed American steel firms.

SOME U.S. OFFICIALS find fault with the reference price formula for several reasons:

• Effectively, they say, it would set a minimum, or floor, price for steel products and lessen pressure on American steel companies, both management and labor, to match the Japanese efficiency.

• American manufacturers of other goods, which in the future might come under import pressure, could demand "reference prices" for their products as well, increasing the amount of world trade hampered by import restrictions.

Top European Common Market officials, in Washington this week to discuss steel and other trade problems, prefer a multilateral approach to steel pricing, with the United States, Europe and Japan making joint decisions.

"THE REAL SOLUTION," said a senior U.S. official, "is a resurgence of domestic demand for steel — in other words, a more buoyant U.S. economy. When that happens, steel imports will shrink naturally."

Currently the economy is growing at less than the 5 per cent pace that government economists consider essential to perk up demand and chip away at unemployment, hovering at the 7 per cent level.

In this situation, the White House is tackling, on a case-by-case basis, specific products whose soaring imports are causing job losses in the United States.

Bilateral agreements were forged with Japan to limit sales of Japanese television sets and with Taiwan and South Korean to reduce a flood of cheap shoes entering the U.S.

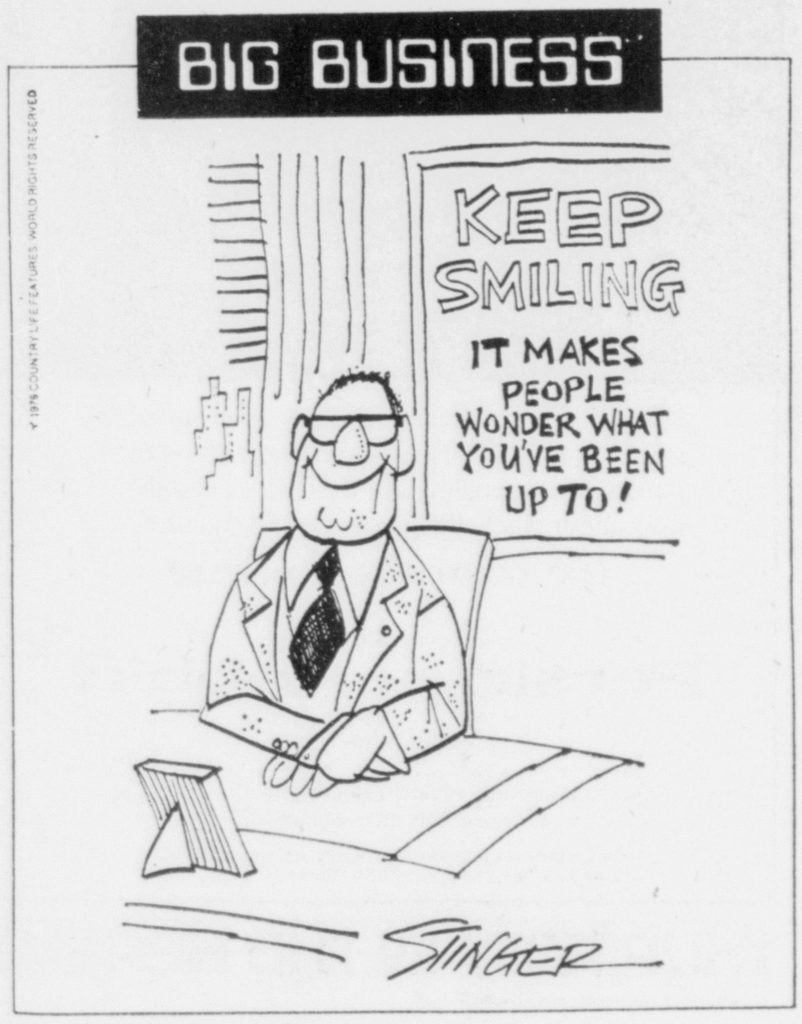
Steel now is the focus, with American steel companies closing entire plants in the face of slack demand and foreign competition. Textiles loom just down the road as the next area of sensitivity.

WE MUST, said a senior U.S. Treasury official, retain our commitment to free trade. Why? Because exports of American goods contribute 8 per cent to the nation's gross national product and create nearly 10 per cent of all jobs in the economy.

In other words, Americans who owe their jobs to exports far outnumber who lose their jobs because of imports.

If the United States puts up trade barriers, White House officials argue, other nations will do the same and U.S. exports would decline, adding to unemployment at home.

Why is this side of the picture not better known? "A job gained through exports," says U.S. Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal, "is less visible than a job lost through imports."



Bond funds, unit trusts safer bet

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK —Investors are flocking to mutual funds and unit trusts that specialize in corporate bonds. Funds are expected to attract some $950 million this year, up more than 40 per cent from 1976. Total sales for unit trusts are not available, but they are larger than for funds. Merrill Lynch along is projecting $800 million for its corporate bond unit trusts, up from $683 million last year, according to Norman Schvey, head of the bond fund department.

Why corporate bonds? The principal reason is steady income, at today's relatively high rates of interest. Current yields for many funds are around 8.5 per cent, which look pretty good to retired people and other investors in low-income brackets. (If your tax bracket is 32 per cent or higher, consider tax-free municipal funds and unit trusts.)

One thing for investors to keep in mind is that bonds do not necessarily keep their capital safe. If you buy a good-quality bond or unit trust and hold until maturity, you can count on getting your money back. But if you sell before maturity, or cash in shares of a mutual fund, you may get more or less for the bonds than originally was paid. Bond prices can gyrate just as rapidly as the price of stocks.

THE AVERAGE INVESTOR is far better off in a mutual fund or unit trust than by buying individual bonds himself. His investment is spread over a large number of bonds, which dilutes his risk; the soundness and yield of the bonds have been professionally evaluated; and he can sell the shares easily, at a favorable price. If you tried to sell a small number of individual bonds, you generally would have to accept a price cut.

Bond funds and unit trusts give you the benefit of pooled investing, but work in slightly different ways. With a bond fund, investors pay the current price of the bonds in the portfolio (net asset value); get a dividend, usually paid quarterly; and can cash in their shares any time they want. As more people buy into the fund, more bonds are added to the portfolio, which can change the interest payment you get, either up or down.

Bond funds can be bought from stockbrokers at an 8.5 per cent sales charge. "No-load" funds, which have no sales charge, are bought directly from the fund management. No-loads include Fidelity Corporate Bond Fund (Boston: yieldiing 8.3 per cent), Northeast Investors Trust (Boston; 8.6 per cent), and Rowe Price New Income Fund (Baltimore; 7.8 per cent).

Unit trusts are sold by several major brokerage houses, among them Paine Webber and E.F. Hutton, but by far the largest number come from Merrill Lynch. Here, you buy into a specific portfolio of bonds, which remains unchanged. As the bonds mature, proceeds are distributed to the trustholders. Dividends are often paid monthly; good firms stand ready to buy back your shares if you want to cash in.

MERRILL LYNCH'S New Intermediate Fund, maturing in about 10 years, yields 8.4 per cent; its most recent long-term fund (around 20 years) paid 8.6 per cent.

There's a sales charge (at Merrill Lynch, 3.5 per cent for intermediate funds, 3 per cent for long-term funds). But unlike regular mutual funds, the unit trusts have no annual management fee. So over the long term, unit trusts are even cheaper to buy than no-load funds.

Which type of fund is better for you? If you're short-term investor, seeking a high yield on money that you've temporarily withdrawn from the stock market, a no-load mutual fund is the better buy, because it saves you the commissions. Mutual funds also may be better if interest rates rise during the long term, because their dividends could rise, too.

Unit trusts would be better for the long-term investor who wants a fixed income he can count on. Payments don't rise or fall as they can with mutual funds. If interest rates fall during the next 10 or 20 years, unit trusts will be particularly profitable, because their yield will hold steady at today's rates, while the yields of mutual funds will decline.

In comparing funds, check their current yields (their current rate of interest). Also check the quality of their bonds — you want a mix of "investment grade" issues, none rated lower than Baa.

Economic views could be better

Northwest Suburban residents are somewhat pessimistic about the economic future of the Chicago area and their personal financial outlooks, according to a survey by the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago.

The bank found 31 per cent of Northwest and Northern suburban residents, who are put in one category for purposes of the survey called "Northern Suburbs," think business in Chicago will be better next year than it is now.

Only 19 per cent think business conditions have improved during the past year, the survey results show.

And while 40 per cent of area residents say their income is more now than it was last year, only 32 per cent believe they are financially better off than a year ago.

Nearly one-half of area families, 48 per cent, believe their income and their financial well-being have not changed while 18 per cent say they are worse off financially.

Recent layoffs at some Chicago-area companies may be discouraging people, said Continental's family economics analyst Janice P. Ventura.

Social Security reform urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Future increases in Social Security benefits should not be awarded in full to most persons with private pension income, a respected economic study organization reports.

The National Planning Assn. said Social Security benefits could be dovetailed with pension plans for persons with higher than average lifetime earnings, but liberalized for workers who had earned less.

In this way, future increases in Social Security benefits would be directed in full to persons without pensions. Pensioners would receive amounts in proportion to their pensions.

The association also suggested a graduated benefit scale for retired persons. This would lead to higher Social Security payments for persons of advanced age who are more likely to be in poor health.

Officials divided on Burns issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter must decide by the end of January whether Arthur Burns, the powerful and independent head of the Federal Reserve Board, will keep his job.

Right now, it appears to be a 50-50 betting proposition as to whether Carter will reappoint Burns when his term expires Jan. 31.

Business leaders surveyed by a magazine some months ago labeled him the "second most powerful man in the country."

Carter is getting advice from all sides as to whether he should let Burns, a conservative Republican, continue to influence economic policy from his perch as head of the nation's central bank.

Burns' supporters and opponents in Congress have squared off over the reappointment issue.

The business community also is pushing hard for Burns' reappointment because it regards him as its champion in the fight against inflation.

Burns presides over an independent government agency that has, among its major responsibilities, a firm control of the supply of money available in the United States.

The money supply influences every facet of the general economy.

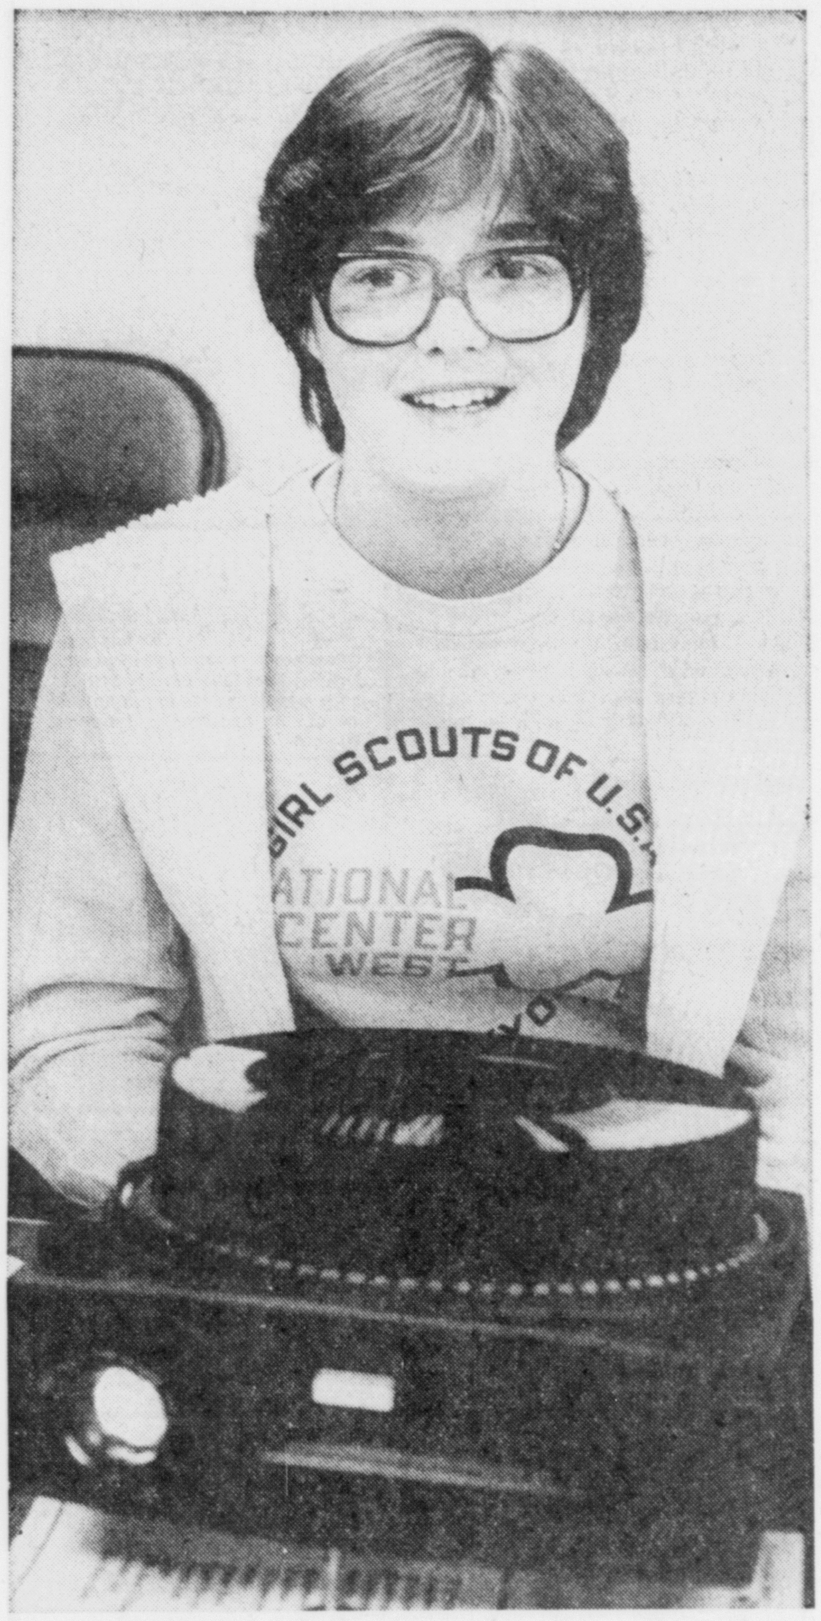
Girls scout around, find learning fun

by ELEANOR RIVES

One could sense the undercurrent of excitement at the Elk Grove Village headquarters of the Girl Scout Council of Northwest Cook County.

The voices of 14 teen-aged girls, their faces flushed with the memories of last summer's extraordinary experiences, filled the room with a pleasant babble. And if words weren't adequate, there were colored slides, hundreds of them, enough to make you wish you were young and a Girl Scout so you could enjoy the national Wider Opportunities program.



"I HAVE FRIENDS all over the country now. It's a great experience," says Carol Ferency, Arlington Heights Cadette, as she shows slides of her adventures in Wyoming at "Ho! West We Go!"

The girls were preparing their presentation for the council's annual dinner, hoping their infectious enthusiasm would spread to the adults present, who in turn would encourage other Cadette and Senior Scouts to apply for the program. It did.

NO ONE CAN describe those 10-day to two-week sessions far away from home as well as the girls who have been there.

Where one went depended on one's abilities and interests. Mary Speciale of Mount Prospect, for example, likes bicycling, and so she chose a week-long outdoor adventure for experienced biking nuts, "Cyc-La-Hike."

Based in cottages at Rockwood Girl Scout National Center, her group of 30 Cadettes, all equipped with new three-speed bikes pedaled their way from Potomac, Md., to the Pennsylvania border, to a point where four states meet, and along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal tow path 18 miles to Washington, D.C.

"A van picked up our bikes in Washington, and we continued sightseeing on foot, including a VIP tour of the White House," she said.

AT THE SAME center, but completely different, was Diane Pfister's 10-day experience at "I am a Woman, Hear Me Roar?" Outstanding female professionals — among them an Episcopal priest, a fashion designer, an architect — encouraged the girls to shape their own futures.

"They convinced us that we can do anything we want to, go as far as we like, all the way to the top if we want to," the Palatine Senior Scout said. She hopes in 1978 to participate in a cultural opportunity in Hawaii, or perhaps an aeronautics session in Arkansas.

Among the group of 14 girls, horsewomen were in the majority. Carol Ferency, an Arlington Heights Cadette, lovts riding, but she's interested in other outdoor activities too, so she chose "Ho! West We Go!", which included backpacking, crafts and archeological dig in addition to horsebackriding, — all at National Center West in Wyoming.

ON THE DIG, she was thrilled to unearth a "flake" used by ancient Indians for making tools. Her bubbling account of a two-day backpacking trip to Margarita Mesa flattens not the least bit when she described how her backpack fell apart. She laughs when she relates how, on a trail ride after she demonstrated her ability to handle a horse and was allowed to run, a low-hanging branch swept her right off the horse's back. "I landed upright on both feet," she exclaimed. "What a stunt! It really made dinner talk."

These are precious memories to Carol, who plans to sample a new opportunity next summer, that of acting. She will apply for "Melody and Make Believe."

Louisa Hart of Hoffman Estates and Kim Bruner of Palatine were "Cadettes on Horseback" for two weeks at National Center West, not only riding every day but learning to take care of their own horses, including packing them up themselves and cleaning saddles, bridles and other equipment.

NEITHER GIRL met the minimum age level of 14 that would admit them to "Saddle Straddle," the top horsewoman opportunity at the Wyoming center. That's their goal for next summer.

Jill Liesenfeldt of Hoffman Estates, Amy Clark of Mount Prospect, Megan Edwards of Arlington Heights, Martha Seastone and Sandra Broeren of Palatine (Sandy has since moved to Oregon) could tell them all about it. Accomplished horsewomen and participants in two weeks of "Saddle Straddle," they found themselves up at dawn, wrangling their horses, cooking breakfast, saddling up and hitting the trail each day, culminating in a six-day pack trip.

Jill enjoyed being able to ride wherever she wanted to, choosing her own trails. She laughs as she relates how one counselor arrived on horseback fully decked out in a Confederate uniform. She will apply for Saddle Straddle again next summer and after that — who knows? — maybe mountain climbing.

THRILLING FOR Amy was the rodeo, in which she took part in barrel racing, a bandana race, a cup-of-water relay — all on horseback. Later in the light and warmth of the campfire that marked the end of the session, Amy's patrol was awarded first place in the rodeo events.

"I'l never forget all the people I met," she said. "So many friends. I got to know them so well. We all cried when we said goodby."

Other girls who took part in 1977 Wider Opportunities were Suzanne Marsh, Wheeling, who delved into communications at "Get the Message," Monmouth College, N.J.; and Kimberly Riecss, Palatine, whose interest in folklore took her to "American Heritage Along the Skyline," Ferrum College, Va. Jane Daughterty, Palatine, traveled to Topeka for "Kansas Sampler," which combined ecology, archeology, ranch life and Indian culture. Kathy Keisler, Palatine, participated in "A Taste of Medicine" at College of St. Mary's, Omaha, Neb.

Catherine Garrett's Wider Opportunity takes place in February 1978. The Palatine Senior will partake in "Winter Wonderland" in Dingman's Ferry, Fla.

FEES FOR THE sessions ranged from $70 to $300 plus round trip transportation. Almost every participant helped finance her own trip, digging into savings, babysitting, doing odd jobs around the house, or, in Amy's case, making and selling rag dolls. One Cadette troop staged a garage sale as a financial boost to its three participants. The Girl Scout Council gave a hand with a total subsidy of $2,970.

The 1978 Wider Opportunities brochure is out and any Cadette or Senior Girl Scout may apply for the event that interests her, provided she meets the age and experience requirements.

The number of girls accepted is limited; 15 from the area in 1977 was a record number. But unless you apply, says the brochure, you'll never know if you could have been one of them.

As one adult leader said, "These girls are the cream of the crop."

SLIDE AFTER SLIDE preserves never-to-be forgotten experiences at "Saddle Straddle," a two-week session, mostly on horseback, at National Center West, Wyo. "Remember when we hobbled our horses and climbed up into this cave?" Megan Edwards, 17, Arlington Heights, left, asks Amy Clark, 15, Mount Prospect. Both girls, accomplished horsewomen, are Senior Scouts.

Pasternak's mistress tells her story

Olga the melody of Lara's theme

Editor's note: In the 17 years since Russian writer Boris Pasternak died, his mistress Olga Ivinskaya, who was the model for the haunting heroine, Lara, in his novel, "Dr. Zhivago," has maintained an uneasy silence. She breaks that silence in the following exclusive interview.

by DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW — Boris Pasternak's dark, piercing eyes stare down from a photograph in Olga Ivinskaya's cramped, two-room apartment.

It has been 17 years since the author-poet's death, but his presence is everywhere.

Snapshots and clippings are piled on her desk or stuck to the bookcase.

Now — as during their 14 turbulent years together — their lives remain entwined.

OLGA IVINSKAYA, 62, was Pasternak's companion and mistress — the woman after whom he patterned the memorable character Lara in his internationally acclaimed novel, "Dr. Zhivago."

"It's not only that I slept with Boris Leonidovich, I was his right hand," she said, in the first interview she has granted a Western correspondent since Pasternak's death. "I knew his thoughts, his deeds, his plans."

She also shared his agony in the international furor created by the publication abroad in 1958 of "Dr. Zhivago," which was denounced by the Soviet Union's official Union of Writers.

After he won the Nobel Prize for literature, Pasternak was forced to choose between accepting the award in Stockholm and never returning home or renouncing it. Under immense pressure, he chose the latter.

Olga said the venomous attacks on Pasternak scarred his memory and forced her to write her memoirs.

"I HAD NO OTHER way out. I did what I had to do."

She said she did not intend for her manuscript to be published abroad, but that, through friends who had read copies of the book, it turned up in the West. It will be published in February.

She said she did not want to stir up "noise" — she just wanted to tell the truth.

Asked if she fears repercussions, Olga said quietly, "Everything is possible."

Sipping Bulgarian wine, Olga swept the air with her hands as she talked, saying editors at the Soviet magazine, Novy Mir, held Pasternak's controversial Zhivago manuscript for seven months without acting on it.

"They were saying to me that they won't be able to publish all of it, but parts of it in segments," she said.

The Soviet Communist Party Central Committee seemed to favor the book, she said, but the Union of Writers wanted to ban it.

Olga said there was a "struggle for priority" and that "Zhivago" came very close to being published.

"THEY EVEN MADE arrangements for a contract to the State Publishing House, but then they demanded to delete something."

Olga said months passed and nothing happened. Then Pasternak took a gamble.

"I recall him meeting me at the railway station," said Olga, staring out her apartment window. "Very guiltily, he said he had given the novel to an Italian (publisher) and I knew already what it smelled of.

"I rushed to get it back, but I couldn't," she said.

Olga said the publisher told Pasternak he would "stay in the shadow" for a year and give Soviet authorities a chance to publish it.

But when it became known the novel was in the hands of a foreign publisher, the editors of Novy Mir hastily wrote a letter rejecting the manuscript, Olga said.

In that letter, written in 1958, the magazine editors attacked Pasternak for political comments expressed by several characters in the book. They referred to the central character — Yuri Zhivago — as having "egocentric views."

THE LETTER criticized the novel at one point because "neither (the character) Alexander Alexandrovich, nor Zhivago have the least trace of a sense of duty to the revolution or to the people."

Olga said the reaction "had nothing to do with the very gist of the novel."

She said the thoughts of secondary characters could have been held by anyone during the upheaval of the 1917 revolution "but all of them were ascribed to the author and they were saying this was his political credo.

"He didn't plan (the book) as a challenge and was very reluctant to take part in any political life. He kept saying it, but you know that people who keep saying that they don't want to get involved in politics — do it all around themselves.

"Willy-nilly, we became the heroes of a certain political situation," Olga said.

But the uproar scared her and, in turn, Pasternak.

"IT WAS I WHO got frightened," she said. "Let my faults be my faults. In the situation which Pasternak would have behaved better and in a nicer way here, I interfered."

She said she pressured him to try to get the book back.

"Then followed the line of those people who wanted to force Boris to reject his novel. And, being afraid for his life, I did what they wanted me to."

In the harsh critique from Novy Mir, the editors said the Pasternak who wrote "Dr. Zhivago" was a different man from the beloved poet of earlier years.

Olga agrees. The years had changed him.

"It was the hard time of Stalinism," she said. "Many of his friends suffered.

"Life made him face such things and made him reconsider, and think it over."

Olga, speaking loudly in Russian, said that's why the characters in the book hold a vast array of political viewpoints.

Yuri Zhivago "was not trying to pose as a hero," she said.

"That was the very essence of the book — that he is not a hero."

OLGA SAID that since Pasternak's death, authorities have hinted they planned to publish a collection of his works, including "Dr. Zhivago." But she called the talk "political smiles" and said nothing has ever come of it.

Pasternak's final years were spent in the village of Peredelkind, a farming and weekend resort community of rolling hills and onion-domed churches 20 miles south of Moscow. Olga and Irina, her daughter by an earlier marriage, also lived there.

Pasternak, who also was still living with his wife, maintained two households.

The feeling of isolation around Peredelkind is not unlike Varykino, the secluded, snow-covered summer home in the Urals where Zhivago and Lara spent their final winter together.

Pasternak's grave is in Peredelkind and Olga says she often visits the

The doctor says

The fat in foods is made of many kinds

I have had two heart attacks, both mild, and am on a low cholesterol diet. What are vegetable fats? Are they polyunsaturated or not?

Can I have peanut butter sandwiches without too much damage to my system?

Judging from the enormous number of letters I get about fats that is one of the most difficult concepts for the public to understand about foods.

The term vegetable fat includes all fats that don't come from animals or animal products. It includes safflower oil, which is low in saturated fat and high in polyunsaturated fat, and coconut oil, which is just the opposite, high in saturated fat and low in polyunsaturated fat. If you want to limit saturated fat and use polyunsaturated fat, don't depend on a food label that just says vegetable fat — it is often conconut oil, saturated fat.

The other point people have trouble with is understanding that the fat in food is made up of several different types of fat. Part of the fat is saturated, part monounsaturated and some polyunsaturated fat. The ratio is important. If you want to eat food that contains fat that is low in saurated fat and relatively high in polyunsaturated fat, you will choose fish, or not quite so good, poultry. The red meats tend to contain fat that is relatively low in polyunsaturated fat.

The number of letters about peanut butter also attests to its place as an American favorite. Half the weight of peanut butter is FAT and about 20 per cent of that fat is saturated fat. You would be better off to choose breast of chicken and eat chicken sandwiches if you want to limit your fat consumption.

I am 69 years old and had a hysterectomy at age 53. A year ago, we moved and I went to a new doctor. He proceeded to do a Pap test. Now it's been a year since the negative test and I received a notice it is time for my yearly Pap test. Is this necessary? I always thought that after the uterus was removed that was it.

From a purist point of view, you could develop cancer of the vagina, but of course your days of worrying about cervical cancer are over. The risk of cancer is indeed small in anyone who has both the cervix and body of the uterus removed.

I still think you should have an annual examination with or without a Pap test. You need to be sure you don't have any lumps in your breasts. You are in the age group for the peak rate of breast cancer (between 55 and 74 years of age). When there, talk your Pap test question over with your doctor.

Unless your ovaries were removed with your uterus, you should have an examination anyway, because ovarian cancer can still occur and is the fifth most common cause of cancer deaths in women in the same age group.

Etiquette says serve salad when you want

Dear Roberta: I think I've a good enough knowledge of basic etiquette not to embarrass or offend anyone I'm with. But I'm absolutely nonplussed when waiters at French restaurants ask me when I want my salad served. What is the right answer?—Frances Knox

The French have salad after the main part of the meal. I prefer mine before dessert too, as taste buds seem to revive with a salad at that point. But I think that's only personal preference, and unless you're abroad and attempting to follow the custom of the country you're visiting, there is no right answer to your question. It's not a breach of etiquette to follow your own custom in your own country. Actually, many prefer salad as a first course, which makes sense because it forestalls hunger without ruining one's appetite for the piece de resistance.

Dear Roberta: What is the difference between Parmesan and Romano cheeses? They sit side by side in the Italian foods section of the supermarket.—Stacy Jackson

Both are hard, dry cheeses, generally used for flavoring when grated. Parmesan is fairly mild, while Romano is sharp and tangy. Many people like a mixture of the two served over spaghetti or other Italian tomato sauce dishes. For best flavor, grate your own from packages of fresh Parmesan (or Parmigiano, as some call it) and Romano bought in the cheese department. You'll need to refrigerate the fresh cheese, unlike the canisters of grated cheese sold unrefrigerated.

Unlined coat a functional garment

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Eunice Farmer: Why in the world would anyone want an unlined coat? I have seen them advertised so much. If you can convince me of the merits of one, I'll continue to be on your bandwagon. —Lucille M.

Dear Lucille: The popularity of layering clothes in recent years has made the unlined coat a No. 1 winner and a must in your wardrobe. It is perfect over jackets, sweaters, vests or any combination of these that fashion dictates.

A heavy, constructed coat is perfect in some climates where the weather is severe for many months of the year. However, most of the country has weather that changes every day and often changes from morning to night. This has made the layered look so popular.

There are several points to remember in making your selection. First, be sure the wool or wool blend is just as beautiful on both sides. If not, plan to use a facing and a faced collar of your fabric.

Pattern selection is very important. One pattern I recommend highly is Simplicity 7936, which comes in several versions. This pattern suggests a facing that could be eliminated depending on the fabric.

Raglan sleeves are best when slipping the coat on over other garments. Also, a drop shoulder style would work well. I happen to be old-fashioned enough that I don't want to struggle getting an unlined sleeve over another garment, so I always line the sleeves. Avoid a very fitted coat with high, small armholes. This style would not be suitable for layering.

Almost any pattern can be adapted for an unlined garment. If you aren't much of a seamstress, try a cardigan coat with raglan sleeves.

Construction details: Cut all construction seams at least one-inch wide. You'll need this excess width since the seams will be flat felled. If your fabric is heavy and doesn't ravel, such as camel hair, cashmere, or melton cloth, you may make a fake flat felled seam. After stitching your seams, press both seam allowances in the same direction and top-stitch one-half inch from seam through three layers of your fabric, and cut off any excess fabric beyond stitching. Also, I have seen the seams pressed open and finished with a narrow binding of lining fabric cut on the bias.

Finishing the outer edges: Cut off the seam allowance if it is to be a single layer coat. Bind all the outer edges including the hem of the coat and the sleeves with a fold-over braid or strips of fake suede.

Readymade unlined coats cost from $75 to more than $400, depending on the fabric, design and designer. You can copy one of these in little time for a mere fraction of the cost of a readymade coat.

The unlined coat is a great extension to your wardrobe. I have one and love it. It's great for wearing in any part of the country and is especially good for traveling.

Have I convinced you of the merits of an unlined coat? I sure hope so!

Dear Eunice Farmer: I'm making a dress from polyester crepe de chine. I have so much trouble with the seams puckering. Can you help me? I've tried everything. — Sheri

Dear Sheri: First, understand that any polyester or synthetic fabric will not look as pressed and flat as a natural fiber. Don't use too fine a machine stitch. Try using 10 to 12 stitches per inch. A shorter stitch causes too much thread build-up that causes puckering.

After stitching a long seam, don't back stitch at the end. After the dress has been removed from the sewing machine, run your fingernail down the seam, easing out any excess fabric as you go along. It doesn't matter if the hem isn't exactly even, perhaps one seam will be as much as one-half inch longer than the other. If this avoids the puckered look, it's important. The hem length can be adjusted when you measure the hem on yourself.

When doing some sample stitching before working on your garment, don't use a tiny square of fabric. Instead, find some long strips of scraps and practice on an actual length of the garment.

This week's winner of gold blazer buttons for this sewing tip is Mrs. M. Lashomb, P.O. Box 255, Chaumont, N.Y. 13622 from the Watertown Daily Times, N.Y.

"Some time ago, I ruined a coat-length sweater that coordinated with a dress I made. Both clothing items had very little wear before I accidentally spilled tomato sauce down the front. Washing or bleaching (the sweater was a bulky acrylic) would not remove the stains.

"I purchased a skein of contrasting acrylic yarn and worked a large cross-stitch design down the front of the sweater on either side. The same design was applied to the dress. I was able to cover the stains completely, maintain a beautiful feminine look and best of all, was able to continue to wear the garments. Friends commented on the attractive stitches. When I told them the real reason, they responded, 'What a clever idea.' Perhaps others can rescue garments by adding a touch of trim or embroidery."

hilly churchyard where he was buried in 1960.

AT HOME, HER memories are at her fingertips. Two albums chronicle their lives together. One shows Pasternak sitting in a window at his Peredelkind dacha, with patches of snow melting in the backyard.

Although she has never seen the film based on "Dr. Zhivago," Olga has pictures of actor Omar Sharif, as Zhivago, and Julie Christie, as Lara.

She smiles when asked if there is any doubt Pasternak patterned Lara after her.

"Lara and I were not identical persons, naturally. But I think that some of the statements she makes are mine, and, of course, there's the lyrical situation."

She said Pasternak once inscribed a book for her: "To Lara, from Yuri."

Indeed, their lives, like those in the novel, were filled with frantic, fleeting moments together and painful departures.

Olga was twice imprisoned because of her ties to Pasternak — the second time after his death.

Perhaps such uncertainties in their life together found a voice in the words spoken by Zhivago as he and Lara made their last trek to Varykino.

"Our days are really numbered," he told her. "So at least let us take advantage of them in our own way." UPI

Barry Goldwater to speak at GOP women's lunch

U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., will speak Thursday at the fall luncheon meeting of the Women's Republican Club of the 10th Congressional District.

The luncheon will be at Allgauer's Fireside Restaurant, 2855 Milwaukee Ave., Northbrook, beginning with a reception at 11:30 a.m. Further information is available from Mrs. O. M. Patterson, 724-5256.

Find your roots

A work meeting with members helping each other and guests in beginning genealogy has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Mount Prospect Library, Emerson and Central, by Northwest Suburban Council of Genealogists.

Discussions at the meeting in Mount Prospect Library will include land records, archive and census records, histories, newsletters and court house records.

Free literature will be available on research in parts of the United States as well as many foreign countries. Genealogical forms at nominal costs also will be available.

Holiday workshop

The public is invited to a demonstration on holiday decorations for the home at 8 p.m. Thursday in Auditorium "A" of Alexian Brothers Medical Plaza, Elk Grove Village. Sponsored by Peony Village Garden Club, the program will be presented by Louise Sterling.

Donation is $1 and 50 cents for seniors and teens. There also will be a Christmas boutique. Those interested in attending the Christmas Garden and Toy Fantasy at McCormick Place, Chicago, Saturday may contact Carol Herringer, 893-5631.

Notify The Herald if meeting changes

Organizations making a change in meeting date because of the Thanksgiving holiday are requested to list this information with the club editor. Club dates falling on the fourth Thursday of November will be eliminated from the Nov. 21 club calendar.

Members' night

Members of Prairie Woods Audubon Society will bring their slides, photographs and other projects related to nature study or fun in the outdoors to share with the group when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The public is invited to the meeting that will be in Arlington Heights Memorial Library, Euclid and Dunton streets. The chapter has 562 members in the Northwest suburbs.

Exchange tea

Their home countries and cultural habits will be discussed Wednesday by a group of American Field Service exchange students at a tea in their honor in the Prospect Heights home of Mrs John Wallace, 11 Stonegate Dr., East.

The tea at 1:15 p.m. will be hosted by the International Affairs Comby the International Affairs Committee of the Arlington Heights Woman's Club. Exchange counselors from area high schools also have been invited.

Reservations are being accepted by Mrs. E. Krafft, 394-4254.

FROM THE FELLING of an oak tree to the application of the craftman's mark on the finished product — barrels like those found by Mrs. Donald Carlson and Barbara Roz at Country Store Antiques on Barrington Road will be depicted on film Wednesday for Palatine Historical Society. "The Cooper's Craft" records the work of cooper George Pettengell, formerly of London, as he reenacts the activity of a small colonial cooperage in 18th Century Williamsburg. The program is at 8 p.m. in Palatine Library.

TV exec takes pressure groups to task

It was just like a pep rally.

ABC Programming Chief Fred Silverman was all but leading a dinner gathering of the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies in a chant of "We won't become the pawns of pressure groups."

In his sharp criticism of pressure group campaigns against broadcasters and advertisers last week, Silverman even took to comparing the boycotting of advertised products on "objectional" television shows to the infamous Red Channel blacklisting of the '50s.

"THERE SEEMS to be a growing unwillingness today to trust broadcasters with the responsibility for program content . . . Today a gaggle of pressure groups are tying to muscle their way into decision-making concerning what goes on television because they don't trust the judgment of the general public. They want to prescreen, then either prejudice or preempt the public's judgment," he said. "That amounts to censorship, and we can't have that." Of course, Silverman used ABC's most controversial new show, "Soap," as an example of being the object of "antidemocratic" and "repressive" pressure group action.

FRED SILVERMAN

"It doesn't matter to them that this program is the newest comedy hit of the season. It doesn't matter to them that 81 per cent of the people who've seen more than one episode enjoy this show and plan to watch more episodes. And it doesn't matter to them that one out of five persons has not found anything objectionable about this show," Silverman said, referring to a Louis Harris poll. "As a matter of fact, nine out of every 10 persons we've surveyed want networks to resist efforts by pressure groups to remove programs like 'Soap.' "

WHILE SILVERMAN came out punching with statistics that seemed a bit contrived, his right hook came when he questioned whether pressure groups have "the First Amendment right to conspire to boycott a company for advertising on a program one doesn't happen to like.

"I don't think so," he said. "I don't think anyone has the right to coerce and punish."

With that, let us just remember where Silverman is coming from. He is a network programmer, probably the brightest in the business. But, because the television industry is a business first and all else second, he is concerned with making profits.

As inspirational as he might have been to the group of advertisers in Chicago last week, Silverman was largely handling them a self serving pitch. He said, in essence, don't you dare pull your advertising out of our shows because of pressure from groups of people who object to the programming because we don't want to lose the advertising income.

Until now, ratings largely have dictated the purchase of commercial air time. If a show's ratings were high, advertisers would be attracted by the sheer number of viewers. "Soap" has had decent but less than the stupendous ratings that ABC was hoping for. It is the only new show that has been in the top 30 every week of the season so far.

IF THE RATINGS are sufficient, then why should Silverman worry about pressure groups' effects on advertisers? Well, pressure groups have been making a difference in the case of "Soap," and the sale of air time for that show hasn't always been easy and hasn't always been possible, sources say.

Pressure groups have emerged this season as another major influence on the purchase of air time, and it is becoming a growing concern to television programmers such as Silverman.

His warning about how dangerous pressure groups can become is justifiable to a degree. Pressure groups that pass judgment on a show sight unseen, based only on what they've heard or read, are being unfair to the public.

Likewise, advertisers who pull their commercials off a show just because of public threats, not having screened the program themselves, are being irresponsible.

BUT, WHAT Silverman and his peers forget is that pressure groups are the public, and they have as much right to protest a television program as the network bosses have to air it.

Other than writing and telephoning their objections to sponsors and programmers, the public has only two other means of expressing their dissatisfaction with a show — turning off their television sets or boycotting sponsor products.

Sometimes boycotting tactics are ruthless, but they are one form of protest that hits the networks where it hurts — in the pocketbook.

There is the need for an effective and responsible system that would allow the viewing public to have some influence over television programming without being suppressive.

IT WOULD be in the best interest of programmers, advertisers and the public to begin communicating their differences and concerns across a round table rather than spilling blood in the marketplace.

Somewhere toward the end of his speech about television emasculation by pressure groups, Silverman mentioned something vague about "dialogue" with such organizations, but never elaborated.

It would be nice to know just what he is doing in that area.

Troupe happy to dance; audience not overjoyed

by LYNN ASINOF

Review

Now one year old, Dancers is not just another contemporary ballet company.

It is a noble experiment, and based on Saturday night's performance at the Auditorium Theater in Chicago, it is one that seems to be working.

Dancers is designed to provide dancers with an alternative to the big, star-studded companies where performers come second to the box office.

It is a company that challenges its members with new choreography, provides lots of personal attention and gives the dancers a voice in the artistic direction of their troupe.

THE IDEA IS that when dancers are happy, they perform better. That leads to more exciting performances, higher quality dancing and greater artistic expression.

The sleek, well-trained bodies of the 14 dancers Saturday night showed company founder Dennis Wayne is doing something right. The men have developed a unified strength, enabling them to master difficult choreography with quiet control. The women are agile and seem to move with the same flow of energy.

Dancers' biggest strength, however, also was its biggest weakness. In developing a program that suited the dancers' need for challenging choreography, the company gave the audience more serious ballet than it could digest.

THREE OF THE evening's five pieces were abstract ballets set to heavy atonal music. Although well performed and choreographically interesting, the pieces seemed to overlap and blur. It was a weighty program, and there was little relief.

"Ramifications," an abstract number by Rudi Van Datzig, was one of the evening's most effective ballets. Exploring the battle between the group and the individual, the ballet used clusters of dancers moving together to create a powerful sense of group pressure.

UNFORTUNATELY, "Ramifications" was followed by "The Arc of Angels," also set to atonal music, and the two ballets blended into a single mood.

Even "Lazarus," the powerful solo by Dennis Wayne, was diminished by the weight of the program.

"The Entertainers," a tongue-in-cheek spoof of a blues bar pickup, provided a brief break in the mood of the program. Christine O'Neal was the hard-bitten blues mama, and Buddy Balou was the affable Joe, looking for a good time. They handled the comedy with a light touch, using long passages in "Slow Goonbash Blues" to build up to a stinging punch line. The only ballet of the evening set to classical music was "Baroque, Concerto No. 8," a pleasant but superficial number that opened the program. It would have had much more impact in the middle of the evening when the ear was yearning for less dissonance.

Dancers is still an experiment. It has proved itself artistically, providing its dancers with an atmosphere in which they thrive.

The first step toward good dancing may be happy dancers, but the audience also is important. And that is the direction that Dancers must take if the experiment is to be a success.

DENNIS WAYNE is the guiding force behind Dancers, the year-old contemporary Ballet company, that is designed to be sensitive to performers need for new roles and choreography.

DANCERS, THE YEAR-old comtemporary ballet company formed by Dennis Wayne, returned to the Auditorium Theatre Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Designed as a dancer's dance company, Dancers has attracted artists from this country's major dance companies, and is a showcase for new choreography.

Car damaged by pipe bomb in Hoffman

prank."

"I don't know who or why or anything about this," Nishimoto said. "Vandals throw bricks through windows, but a pipe bomb is not kid stuff anymore. Someone could get hurt."

NISHIMOTO SAID his wife, June, had been asleep on the couch just under the picture window when the bomb went off. "She is shaken. And I wonder. I wonder who and why. Why me?"

Ann and Heather Rutenber of Arlington Heights were playing on slide Saturday in back of the First United Methodist Church, 1903 E. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights, when they noticed a small object stuffed in the sand underneath the slide.

Ann, 12, said she didn't know exactly what it was, "but it was a blue bottle with wires sticking out the top." Her sister, nine year-old Heather, said "It had tape on top, too."

They picked up the object and took it to their dad, Thomas Rutenber, who was preparing food inside the church for a pancake brunch for the congregation.

"I TOOK A quick look at it and got it out of the building as quickly as I could," Rutenber, 39, of 203 W. Euclid Ave., said.

The home-made bomb, a blue chemistry lab beaker with liquid inside and a fuse wire sticking out the top, was disarmed by members from the Cook County Sheriff's police bomb and arson squad.

Rutenber said he has "never been close" to a bomb, but knew what one looked like from photographs and samples used by railroad police whom he worked with occasionally.

Capt. Paul Buckholz, Arlington Heights Police, said Sunday the bomb, which contained enough gasoline to equal about a half stick of dynamite, did not explode because "there was apparently not enough oxygen in the bottle."

TWO ARLINGTON Heights juveniles were apprehended Sunday in connection with the bomb, but no charges have been filed.

It was only last week that a maintenence man in an Elk Grove Village industrial park found a metal encased bomb on a driveway. Paul Reed found the bomb, loaded with gunpowder, at the Rogers Industrial Park, near 1551 Elmhurst Rd.

ANN RUTENBER, 12, and her sister Heather, 9, kneel beside the slide where they found a "bottle bomb" underneath a slide at First United Methodist Church, 1903 E. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights. The pair found the bomb while playing on the slide Saturday afternoon.

A FRAGMENT from a pipe bomb placed under June Nishimoto's car Sunday ripped through hedges, a storm door, main door, and closet door before penetrating a piece of 2 by 4 wood in the home. Police took the fragment for evidence in the car bombing.

Obituaries

GEORGE H. MUELLER

Services for George H. Mueller, 82, a resident of Arlington Heights, will be at 11 a.m., Wednesday, at the Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights. Burial will be in Rosehill Cemetery, Chicago.

THOUGHTS ON A MATTRESS

How many coils should there be in a good innerspring mattress? Some stores would lead you to believe that the more coils the better the mattress. This is somewhat of a misrepresentation to put it mildly.

If this is true, then why do almost all of he major mattress manufacturers use an innerspring unit in the 308 to 322 coil range in the best mattress they make? Because they have determined from years of experience that an inherspring unit in this coil range, combined with the right gauge of wire in the coils, makes the most comfortable and the most durable mattress.

The fact is that the more coils you put in a mattress, the smaller the coil you must use. The smaller the coil, the lighter gauge wire you must use. The result is a softer coil and softer unit. Or in other words, less support and less durability.

Some day maybe someone will make a mattress with 5,000 coils in it. It may not be very comfortable and may not last very long, but it will have lots of coils.

In the meantime we will just keep making good, comfortable mattresses like they used to make them.

Now, if you are thoroughly confused by all this conversation about coils, come in and let us show you the actual innerspring units that we put in our mattresses. Maybe we can deconfuse you.

Bears beat clock—and K.C., 28-27

by BOB GALLAS

Many of the Bears believe all they need is two consecutive wins to turn their so far disappointing season around. But first, they need to put two good halves together.

The Bears won the final two minutes, two touchdowns to one, Sunday, to escape with a 28-27 win over Kansas City on Greg Latta's 37-yard touchdown catch with just three seconds to play. But the victory celebration was tempered by the memory of Kansas City's 17-0 halftime lead and nearly three quarters of Bear slumber.

"We won on a miracle," said safety Gary Fencik. "I hope it's not the last one we have this year but I don't think we should count on winning like that every week."

IT WAS LATTA'S miracle — preceded by three Walter Payton touchdowns — that saved the Bears from the ash heap, at least temporarily. Payton's third TD of the day with 2:02 to play had given the Bears a 21-20 lead. But the Chiefs came right back with a 56-yard drive to take a 27-21 edge with 34 seconds to play.

Starting from their own 43-yard line, it took just two plays, a 20-yard pass to fullback Robin Earl and Latta's "miracle" to do in the Chiefs, who just about did in themselves.

"They (Kansas City) chose with a 17-point lead to go against the wind (to start the second half) so we thought they'd be running more and used some blitzes to stop their running game," said coach Jack Pardee, who didn't need to point out that the Bears enjoyed plum field position during the entire second half but almost didn't take advantage of it.

Brian Baschnagel opened the second half by returning the ball 55 yards but the Bears ended up missing a field goal when holder Baschnagel couldn't get the ball into kicking position.

BASCHNAGEL GAVE the Bears good field position on their next possession with a 42-yard punt return. A Kansas City fumble and a Gary Fencik interception gave Chicago more prime acreage near midfield. The worst field position the Bears had in the second half was their own 39-yard line.

After giving up 17 points in the first

WONDERFUL WALTER. The Bears' Walter Payton leaps, shoulders high, over the Kansas City line to score one of his three touchdowns Sunday in dramatic 28-27 victory over Kansas City. Payton carried 33 times and gained 192 yards for 1,129 yards in nine games this season.

Hey, it's not so easy writing this stuff

This is Monday morning, isn't it? Look at the head lines and tell me this is Monday.

Sometimes the weekend just destroys me, wipes me out, leaves me thinking that Monday is really Tuesday and Tuesday is in the middle of next month.

LOOK AT THE headlines this morning and tell me if you see anything in there about the Bears losing a ball game. I'm sure it happened, but where is it?

If the Bears lost, this MUST be Monday.

Okay, no more excuses. As the man on the television said (more than once), you have to give the Bears credit. This IS a Monday morning and the headlines would scream at you if they could. They would scream until your head started pounding with an ache greater than any plain old Sunday morning Excedrin headache. The Bears won and no pain could be so pleasurable.

So this really is Monday, then. But what am I doing here? What can I add to the day's happenings?

THE EDITORS WANT good, hard copy for Monday. They want opinion, controversy, something to sink teeth into. They want analysis and intellectual probing.

The Bears' 28-27 victory Sunday over the Chiefs absolutely defies intellectual probing. It defies probing of any kind. So we'll leave that to the sages. If Jack Pardee can explain this one, he's got my vote for NFL coach of the year.

So where's the teeth-sinking stuff?

What most readers probably don't realize is that while they sit at the breakfast table on Monday morning reading these words of gibberish, those same words represent a long difficult Sunday of work for the tireless journalist.

LOTS OF READERS come up to me with the nerve to say, "Gee, what an easy job you must have. To think you actually get paid for what you do!"

Which is true. We really do get paid for it.

But just as an example, let me fill the reader in on what a typical Sunday is like at the Daily Herald.

Assuming that I managed to find the front door on Saturday night, morning breaks through the window to waken me with a start. The day begins.

OFF TO WORK, which in this case means a crisp, refreshing five-mile jog, dodging around speeding church-goers as the carbon monoxide fumes cast an eerie shadow over the landscape. My lungs rise to meet the challenge.

Once at the office, I discover that I have forgotten my key, so I gain entry by throwing medium-sized pebbles at the window until someone's attention is aroused. This is known as "letting them know you're there."

Much of the morning is taken up by phone calls — some of them incoming and some outgoing. Many of them are from people wanting to know who won the Iowa-Wisconsin game. Many of them conceivably lost their shirts or blouses on Wisconsin.

Soon it is 1 p.m. This is a special time for most sports fans between September and December. It is better known as Kickoff Howdy Doody Time.

FOR THOSE OF you who can't seem to grasp the amount of labor that has already gone into this particular Sunday at the Daily Herald, don't go away now. It may sound like a dream come true watching the Bears for a living, but it ain't necessarily so.

First of all, there's the problem of reception. William Randolph Hearst of Joseph Pulitzer or somebody had the notion that the country's newspapers would be required to function in the event of a holocaust, so the Daily Herald's roof is constructed out of kryptonite. There's more snow per inch on our little six-inch screen than there was in Buffalo last year.

It stands to reason that a Bear fan wants to see the Bears win. Unless, of course, the Bear fan is a sportswriter who has already written his story.

If you've written the story and somewhere in there it says that the Bears lost, well then you want the Bears to stay losers. It helps add credibility to the story.

NOW COMES THE hard part of the Sunday workaday grind. Get your wits together, try to collect your thoughts, and, quick, think of something to write.

It's not as easy as you might expect, as some perspicacious readers have already gathered.

I'll leave you with the day's most intriguing nugget of sports information, one that you've undoubtedly read elsewhere on this page. Namely, the Bears are 4-5 and still in the playoff picture.

That's hardly grist for you Monday morning quarterbacks. Or is this Tuesday?

Fans mad—till last second

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

The fans were ready from the beginning. They were determined to voice their resentment at the Chicago Bears' recent downfall.

They did it with shreiking yells and 7,816 no shows. They closed the door and headed for the gates when the Bears' defense gave up an apparent game-winning score on Ed Pololak's 14-yard run.

Less than half of the 49,407 Soldier Field crowd remained for the final 29 seconds. And even fewer saw Greg Latta's winning catch and the Bears' 28-27 comeback win over the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday.

"IF I HAD been a fan, I don't know if I would have stayed around," linebacker Don Rives said. "The bad thing about it is that we had so many opportunities to win before the last play."

"I feel sorry for the people who left," Jerry Meyers said. "They missed one helluva finish."

For Chicago, the finish appeared to be Walter Payton's 15-yard touchdown run with 2:02 left and a 21-20 Chicago lead.

Kansas City fought back and drove to the Bears' 14-yard line with 29 seconds remaining in the game. With one time out left, the Chiefs bypassed the logical field goal attempt and sent Podolak around right end for the touchdown. A Bears' offside penalty was declined.

A PASS interference call on safety Gary Fencik gave the Chiefs new life and four more plays from the Bears 14.

"The receiver was right in the alley," Fencik explained. "I got jammed and had to do something. I couldn't even see what their quarterback was doing."

Kansas City squibbed the ensuing kickoff past the Bears' front wall desperately avoiding return specialist Brian Baschnagel. The two-year vet-

Black Hawks fall in wild finish

by JEFF NORDLUND

The largest crowd of the season, 17,263, came hoping to see their Black Hawks had changed this season, while skating against the defending Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens at the Chicago Stadium Sunday night.

But what they saw was the reason Montreal is the best, as the slick-skating Canadiens scored twice in the final four minutes for a 3-2 victory.

Phil Russell's second goal of the season with only 3:48 to play broke a 1-1 tie and appeared to cinch the biggest victory of the season for the Hawks.

But only 43 seconds later Yvon Cournoyer slapped in the equalizer unassisted and with just 58 seconds remaining Guy Lapointe smashed a shot from the right point into the net for the winner, also unassisted.

The startling turn of events ruined a good effort by the Hawks who looked at the showdown with Norris Division leader Montreal as a test of how much they have improved this season.

Ivan Boldirev also scored for the Hawks, tying the game 1-1 in the second period.

THE CANADIENS opened the scoring when Guy LaPointe poked the puck past Tony Esposito while the Hawks were two skaters short at 17:51 of the first period.

Standing in front of the crease, LaPointe picked up the rebound off Larry Robinson's shot and flipped it into the net for his fourth goal of the season. Jacques Lemaire also assisted.

Neither team had much of a chance to skate on even terms with its opponent during the first period. The Hawks' six minor penalties in the period set up four Montreal power plays, and the Canadiens returned the favor giving the Hawks the man advantage twice.

Although the Hawks had a couple good chances on their power plays, that was all the chances they had the entire period. They registered a meager three shots on goal to Montreal's eight.

BOLDIREV EVENS the score at 1-1 at 17:51 of the second period when he beat Canadian goalie Ken Dryden while skating as part of the Hawks' power play. Boldirev took a behind-the-net pass from Grant Mulvey and lifted his point-blank shot over Dryden's shoulder. Ted Bulley also assisted.

Esposito kept the NHL's leading scorer, Guy LaFleur, at bay nearly single-handedly in the middle period. He foiled the flashy winger's break away efforts twice and had another shot by LaFleur bounce off the post and back into play.

Russell's goal late in the third period was assisted by Pierre Plante and John Marks, but it was Russell's individual effort that paid off most. He took the puck and skated around the entire Canadien goal before flipping the puck past Dryden.

Schaumburg girls take state title

by DOROTHY O'SULLIVAN

Winning a state title is sweet, indeed, but when that title is the first ever in a school's history in any sport, boys' as well as girls', well . . .

The Schaumburg High School girls' field hockey team savored some of that sweetness Saturday when it defeated defending state champion New Trier West 3-0 in overtime to win the state crown in Lake Forest.

Scoreless at the end of regulation time, the game was won as penalty shots off the sticks of Judy Haase, Vikki Borys and Leticia Rodriguez found the net. Saxon goalie Liz Walker turned back all three of New Trier's shots to wrap up the game and the title.

"I really expected we could score on New Trier (in regulation time), but they really played well," said Kay Winkelhake, Schaumburg's coach.

ALL THREE SAXON wins in the tournament came in overtime. The Schaumburg-Woodstock semifinal game early Saturday ended in a 2-2 deadlock, with Kim Wallner and Claudia Trendel tallying for Schaumburg. Each team was successful on only one of its five allotted overtime penalty shots, necessitating a second overtime. Score by Rodriguez, Wallner and Haase gave Schaumburg a 6-4 victory and the right to advance to the finals.

"We are still not playing up to what we should be. We were lucky to tie in regulation time," said Winkelhake, following the Woodstock match.

Friday Schaumburg topped Lake Forest 3-1 in overtime in the opening

How good are Vikes without Tarkenton?

by United Press Internatonal

Fran Tarkenton fractured a leg bone after completing 17-of-18 passes for 195 yards and was wheeled off the field on a stretcher after helping his Vikings to a 42-10 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals Sunday.

A spokesman for the team said it was doubtful the star quarterback would be able to play for the rest of the season. Tarkenton, one of the most durable players in NFL history who failed to start only one game in 16 previous seasons, suffered the injury late in the third quarter when he was sacked for a 12-yard loss.

The quarterback's completion mark of 94 per cent broke the 90.91 per cent one-game NFL record held by Ken Anderson of Cincinnati, but couldn't be counted as a league record, which requires at least 20 pass attempts.

In other games Sunday, it was Baltimore 31 Buffalo 13; Pittsburgh 35 Cleveland 31; Atlanta 17 Detroit 6; Miami 17 New England 5; New York Giants 10 Tampa Bay 0; Seattle 17 New York Jets 0; Washington 17 Philadelphia 14; Los Angeles 24 Green Bay 6; San Francisco 10 New Orleans 7 in overtime; Denver 17 San Diego 14; and Oakland 34 Houston 29.

In Monday night's game St. Louis visits Dallas.

The Colts picked up their eighth victory of the season against only one loss as Lydell Mitchell ran for 82 yards and touchdowns of five and 18 yards.

THE FALCONS' defense took charge in the final period, holding the Lions scoreless and scoring all 17 of their points. Middle linebacker Ralph Ortega snatched up a fumble and ran 14 yards to score the go-ahead touchdown with 8:02 left in the game after the Falcons scored on a 31-yard Fred Steinfort field goal 30 seconds after the final quarter began.

The Pats were shut out through a first half for the first time in 25 games as the Dolphins Gary Davis scored one touchdown and set up a field goal with a 73-yard kickoff return.

THE HAPLESS Bucs suffered their 23rd straight loss as the New York Giants took advantage of various miscues, including being handed the ball on the Tampa Bay 1-yard line in the first quarter.

The Seahawks defense turned in the first shutout in their history and the Jets, playing without injured quarterback Richard Todd, lost their fifth straight game. Seahawks quarterback Jim Zorn completed 16-of-37 passes for 219 yards and two touchdown passes to blank the Giants.

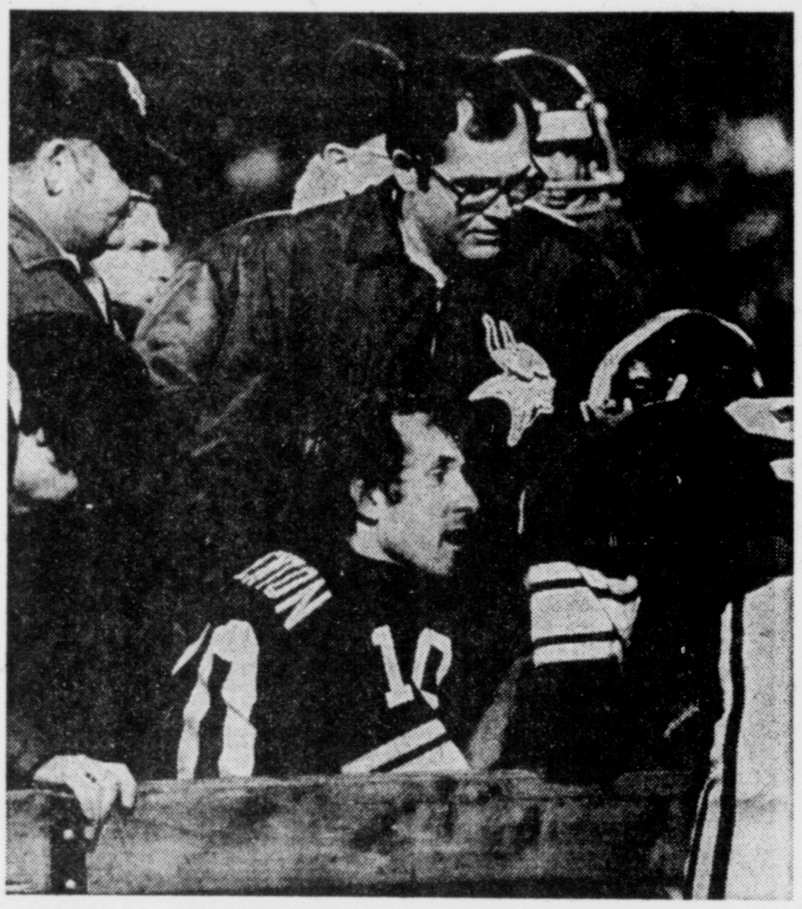
QUARTERBACK JOE Theismann engineered the Redskins winning drive from his own 36 and Mark Moseley kicked a team record 54-yard field goal with 3:41 to play Sunday to lead the team to victory.

The Rams won their first road game as the team broke the game open in the second quarter by scoring three times in the first 11 minutes.

THE 49ERS won their fourth straight game as Ray Wersching booted a winning 33-yarder with 6:33 gone in overtime on the team's first possession of the extra period.

Craig Morton rallied the Broncos to a come-from-behind win, hitting wide receiver Haven Moses with a pair of second-half touchdown passes which included an 8-yarder on fouth down with 1:36 remaining.

Ken Stabler kept the Raiders atop the AFC West, completing 23 passes for 255 yards and two touchdowns, including an 11-yarder to Dave Casper and a 14-yarder to Fred Biletnikoff which gave them a 17-16 halftime lead.



MINNESOTA QUARTERBACK Fran Tarkenton waits on the bench for a stretcher, left, and is wheeled to a waiting ambulance after being injured in third quarter Sunday against Cincinnati. Tarkenton who had completed 17-of-18 passes, suffered a fracture of a leg bone and is 'very doubtful' for the remainder of the season.

World Open in bowling center ring

by JIM COOK

There will be a good selection of sentimental favorites to cheer for when the Professional Bowling Assn. tour stops at Northern Bowl in Glendale Heights beginning tonight for the $100,000 Brunswick World Open tournament.

The week-long competition gets rolling during three qualifying sessions at 9 a.m., 1:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. today as the bowlers begin the long and strenuous journey through 56 games that climaxes in the televised finals at 1 p.m. Saturday on Channel 5.

Local aspirants in the field of over 150 bowlers include Palatine's Les Zikes, manager of Beverly Lanes in Arlington Heights, Doug Beck of Richmond, Don Burza of Round Lake and Frank Huspen of River Grove.

CHICAGO NATIVES include Chet Dziedzina, Dale Buchardt and, of course, Hall-of-Famer Carmen Salvino. The smooth right-hander was 10th last year behind defending champion Gary Dickinson and is sixth on the all-time money-winning list with over $350,000.

Zikes, who always commands a strong following at the matches, is well-rested after a brilliant showing at the American Bowling Congress Championships where he captured his sixth ABC title with a 693 series. His team, Columbia Bowling Balls, won the Classic team championship.

"I'm throwing the ball well, but I can't seem to get tracked at Northern Bowl," Zikes said. "The house is a good one and I'm anxious to get out there and start shooting."

Dickinson, who pocketed the $14,000 first prize last year, headlines the field that also includes all-time money winner Earl Anthony and 1977 leading money winner Mark Roth.

THE FIELD is divided into three squads for the opening 24 games of the competition, today, Tuesday and Wednesday. The top 48 bowlers advance to semi-final action at 11 a.m. Thursday while the field is cut again to the top 24 for the session at 7 p.m.

On Friday, the top 24 continues bowling eight head-to-head matches at noon and 7 p.m. shifts with the five leading bowlers moving into the televised finals at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Ticket prices for morning and afternoon sessions today, Tuesday and Wednesday are $2.50 while evening sessions those three days plus Thursday morning are $3. Thursday evening's performance is $3.50, Friday afternoon is $4.50, Friday night $6 and Saturday afternoon $6.

Northern Bowl is accessible by taking Rte. 53 south to North Ave. (Rte. 64) and west to the bowling center at 558 E. North Ave.

round of the tournament.

"In the first two games we were not playing out best," said Winkelhake. "We looked better (in the championship game), still not our best but it was the best game we played in the tournament."

Winkelhake said Faith Peterson was the most consistent Saxon player in the tournament. "Leticia is the leader. She was sluggish and the rest of them felt it," she said.

THOUGH PETERSON, Rodriguez and Walker, all seniors, will not be back next season, Winkelhake believes the outlook is bright for Schaumburg. "We have an excellent junior varsity team which will supply talent," she said.

The team also will have a new head coach next year.

"I'm expecting a baby in May," said Winkelhake, "I will be leaving in January, but the program will continue. The school is looking for a new coach."

"We wanted to win it this year for Mrs. Winkelhake," said Wallner. Undoubtedly Wallner, a sophomore, is one of the reasons for Winkelhake's optimism about next year. Wallner led all scorers with 33 goals this season.

"It's great, it's wonderful," said Peterson of the championship. "The team will win next year, too, in spite of losing three seniors," she added.

Support from the sidelines apparently is an important factor to the team on the field, and Schaumburg fans seemed to outnumber those of the opposition by a wide margin at Saturday's game.

"WE WANT TO thank our parents and friends and Barrington for coming out," said one Saxon. "We beat them (Barrington) in the sectionals and now they came out to root for us. It's unbelievable," she said.

VICTORY OVER DE FEET.

People these days do a lot of running around.
Sometimes for fun. But most of the time they're going someplace. Or coming home from same.
So along comes Puch with a great idea. A method of getting there and back that beats walking by a country mile because it's a lot more fun and doesn't cost a whole lot more.
A Puch has pedals for starting and a peppery little engine for zipping you around without blisters, bunions, or getting out of breath.
It travels at the rate of up to 150 miles per gallon. Starts at about $469. And goes for a long time with practically no maintenance at all.
Do something nice for your feet. Come in and ride a Puch today.

Schurz crushes Palatine soccer hopes

HEADS UP. Palatine's Ric Puls (12) uses his head to good advantage in state soccer play. The Pirates opened with a victory Friday but bowed out Saturday and finished fourth over-all at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb.

DeKALB—All good things must come to an end.

For Palatine's 1977 soccer season, that conclusion came on a very sunny, very cold morning here Saturday.

The Chicago Public League champion Schurz Mustangs stampeded to a 4-0 triumph over the Pirates, ending Palatine's state championship quest in the semifnals.

"What can I say," Pirate coach Rod Gibbs said with a shrug after his team had succumed for the seventh time this year, to go with 12 victories and a tie. "We're a green team that's been on a roller coaster all season . . . we just couldn't put it all together today."

WHAT PALATINE couldn't manufacture, the Mustangs stitched together with ease. Winners 3-0 in their state opener Friday against Morton East, Schurz broke open a scoreless deadlock with the Pirates on a pair of Juri Oks' goals in the second quarter.

"They did a good job of clogging things up in the middle," Gibbs said. His simple assessment was verified by statistics showing only five goalie saves registered all game by Mustang Leonardo Garcia.

Even a Pirate penalty kick by Bob Curylo late in the game — usually a sure score — was brushed aside by Garcia.

PERHAPS THE only other solid Palatine scoring opportunity occurred late in the first quarter when the game was still at 0-0. Andy Deutschmann, moving in from the right side, had a ball centered to him not more than 10 yards away from a weakly protected goal.

In his haste to get a shot off before the hole closed up, he chipped the ball a little too high and it soared ineffectively over the net.

MOST OF PALATINE'S other penetrations were knocked aside by burly Schurz fullback Angel Cunalata.

Oks plunked in his first goal from 12 yards out on a serve from Bill Drozd and scored again nine minutes later on a followup shot after Pirate goalie Mike Charlier had been drawn out of the cage.

The second goal was the third of the tournament for Oks, tying the state meet record. Drozd, who also had scored in the Morton East game, added his name to the tourney record log by kicking in third and fourth period goals against Palatine.

SATURDAY EVENING Schurz found themselves on the other side of a romp as Granite City South notched their second straight state championship by destroying the Mustangs, 6-1.

Earlier in the gathering Granite City had turned aside New Trier East 2-1 and Wheaton Central 2-0.

As he had done before the state showdown, Gibbs continued to view the tourney philosophically:

"It's hard to equate the results of one game against another or even the strengths of two teams by one game. We've beaten teams of equal stature to Schurz and in many ways Quigley South (a 3-1 loser to the Pirates Friday) was just as good if not a better team than the one that beat us today.

"In this game though, Schurz just wanted it more than we did."

Cuban boxers take 7 of 11 fights from U.S.

HOUSTON (UPI)—A team of Cuban boxers won seven of 11 fights from the United States Saturday, including a controversial split decision by heavyweight Angel Milan over Greg Page of Louisville, Ky.

Page knocked Milan down in the first round and appeared to have easily whipped the Cuban, but the unpopular decision went to Milan. A crowd of more than 6,000 persons in the Astrohall Arena booed vociferously.

And, although Olympic gold medalist Angel Herrera of Cuba won a brutal, unanimous decision over Rocky Lockridge of Tacoma, Wash., in the featherweight division, that decision, too, was unpopular with the crowd.

A portion of the boxing was viewed by a national television audience.

AMERICAN WINNERS Saturday were Jerome Coffee of Nashville, Tenn., who won by a decision over Samuel Belford in the flyweight class; Anthony Fletcher of Philadelphia, a winner by decision over Jose Aguillar in the lightweight class; Jeffrey Stoudemire of Cleveland, who outpointed Emilio Correa in the welterweight division; and Clinton Jackson of Nashville, who downed Luis Martinez in the light middleweight class.

The wins by Fletcher and Stoudemire were split decisions.

In the only knockout of the day, middleweight Jose Gomez floored Lindell Holmes of Toledo, Ohio, in the second round.

The other Cuban winners, all by decision, were Jorge Hernandez over Richard Sandoval of Pomona, Calif., in light flyweight; Adolfo Horta over Wayne Lynumn of Chicago in bantamweight; and Olympic silver medalist Andres Aldama over Ronnie Shields of Port Arthur, Tex., in lightwelterweight.

Ruebin Aguirre of Norwalk, Calif., forfeited to Cuba's Herman Baezz in light heavyweight.

Deerfield strides to another cross country state title

by ART MUGALIAN

Tom Graves

Len Kisellus takes his hat off to any cross country team that can finish second in a state meet with Deerfield present.

So the Deerfield coach removed his fedora in praise of York, the team that used to dominate the IHSA meet like the Celtics once dominated the NBA.

"I'm sure York was very happy with second place," said Kisellus, a 30-year veteran of coaching cross country. "They knew we'd have to collapse for them to beat us. (Coach) Joe Newton has been here before and I knew his kids would run smart.

"I THINK THEY just decided to forget about Deerfield and try to run the very best race they could," he said.

York was second with 134 points Saturday, far behind Deerfield's 71-point total, the best state showing since York's 64 in 1973.

Winning this 32nd annual state meet, held in Peoria for the eighth straight year, was virtually out of the question for any school except Deerfield. The defending champion Warriors were such solid favorites that even Kisellus took the victory in stride.

"Any time you can win, it's nice," the coach said.

BUT THAT'S NOT to say Kisellus wasn't worried, especially when his No. 3 runner, Mark McCallister, dropped out of the race with a pulled muscle in his leg. McCallister was running with a dozen stitches in his foot from a spike wound suffered in last week's Crystal Lake Sectional.

"There we were a mile and a quarter into the race," Kisellus said, "and one of our top guns was out."

Another of Deerfield's best runners, Keith Hampton, was operating with a bad thigh, having missed a full month of racing before coming back for the sectional. Hampton's seventh place in the state meet was a pleasant surprise.

Incredibly, McCallister's twin brother, Todd, ran the race of his life, finishing third in 14:21 behind winner Tom Gravts of Sandburg and runnerup Jim Spivey of Fenton. Junior Tom Stevens picked up the slack for the other McCallister by finishing 13th.

"THE ONLY DISAPPOINTING thing is that we couldn't show people just how good we are," said Kisellus. "It's frustating for me that I couldn't take them as far as they're capable of going. We had three kids in the top 15, but we should have had four.

"But we've had injuries all season," he added. "Every week we just patched up and went out to run."

So what's next for Kisellus and Deerfield? For Kisellus, anyway, it's time to hang 'em up. "I do plan on getting out now," he said. "I've paid my dues. It's been torture — sweating it out each week. I knew this was a great team. If they didn't win, it would have been a catastrophe.

"But I didn't want to leave them with nothing coming back," Kisellus said. "There'll be a good team left for next year."

GRAVE'S VICTORY in the 3-mile course was the fourth fastest ever run at Detweiller Park, a 13:56.6. Spivey, for the second straight year, was right behind Graves. This year Spivey was less than four seconds back.

Fremd, led by Tom Ross in 12th place individually, was the top local team, finishing third. Palatine was sixth, paced by Tom Johnson's ninth-place medal, and Arlington finished 19th.

When we decided to open a new office in Rolling Meadows, we knew that you already had many, many alternative places to keep your checking and savings accounts. We knew that to earn your confidence and your business, we would have to be different...and better than any of the other banks and savings associations which were already here.

This area, we knew, does not need "just another savings and loan."

We plan to be different in the kinds of services we offer, the kinds of accounts we provide and even the kinds of premium gifts we give to savers.

We'll soon be opening our doors, and we'll be telling you more specifically just what it is that makes us different. Watch for our messages. We plan to tell you why, when you think money, think Security.

COMING UP ROSES. There's a Ford in the future of the Rose Bowl . . . former President Gerald R. Ford. The fourth U.S. President to serve as Grand Marshall for the parade and football game, he is greeted by 18-year-old Rose Bowl Queen Maria Lynn Caron.

Miracle finish lifts Bears to win

two quarters the defense rose to the occasion in the second half, forcing a fumble and an interception.

"The second half was different," said Fencik, who couldn't explain why the Bears suddenly awoke from early hibernation. "I guess when you get desperate you start playing desperate. And we did."

The offense must have been just as desperate as the defense as it scored 21 points in the final quarter.

"WE DIDN'T play a perfect game," said Pardee. "I'm proud of the way they hung in there. Lord only knows how much adversity we've been through this week with all the injuries. They showed me the kind of composure we need."

The Bears did about as much wrong as they could get away with Sunday, mostly in the first half, when they racked up seven penalties for 62 yards and relied on a one-man offense named Payton.

Payton carried 13 of the 16 times the Bears ran the ball in the first half, gaining 99 of the 107 yards gained rushing in the half. He finished with 192 yards and 33 carries.

Bob Thomas missed two field goal attempts in the game, including a 33-yard attempt in the second quarter that hit the crossbar and bounced out.

"I HIT THAT one as good as I hit a ball this year," Thomas said. "The wind caught it and it just died."

Thomas also missed a 29-yard attempt in the fourth quarter. That one had the distance but was wide to the right.

"There's no excuse for missing those that close," Thomas said. "I should make those."

The fans came ready to boo middle linebacker Don Rives, playing in his first home game since calling the Bear fans "fair weather fans." But by the second half, Rives had company. The fans were booing the entire team.

CHICAGO HAD to start two youngsters at the outside linebackers, Jerry Muckensturm in place of Doug Buffone, who's in the hospital with pneumonia and rookie Gary Campbell started in place of Waymond Bryant, out with a shoulder injury.

Pardee said Bryant would play only in an "emergency." The emergency came after Pardee watched Campbell miss several tackles in the first quarter. Bryant started the second quarter and played the rest of the game.

BEAR FACTS: The win was the first ever for the Bears against Kansas City, who have won twice in preseason and once in regular season encounters with Chicago . . . Walter Payton surpassed the 1,000 yard rushing mark Sunday with 192, making him back-to-back 1,000 yard seasons, an accomplishment that has escaped all other Bear running backs, including five Hall of Famers.

Fans came to boo but had to cheer

eran from Ohio State picked it up nonetheless and returned it 22-yards to Chicago's 43.

"It was a bit unusual that they would kick it near me especially after a few of the early runs," Baschnagel said. "I guess they figured a squibber is hard to handle and would give us poor field position."

Baschnagel returned six kickoffs for 142 yards and had another 58-yard scamper brought back on a penalty. As a rookie last season, Baschnagel led the NFL in returns with 754 yards.

HIS 24-YARD average to date on 22 returns gives him 536 yards through nine games.

"Timing is the most important on returns. Not as much ability as you would think," Baschanagel said. "Sure, speed and agility are always an extra but if you can hit that hole at the proper spot, your chances are better."

Quarterback Bob Avellini worked the Chiefs' secondary for a 20-yard pass to fullback Robin Earl putting the ball on the 37-yard line with 10 seconds remaining. Chicago called a time out.

"We discussed several plays on the sidelines," coach Jack Pardee said. "We talked about three receivers but Avellini kept insisting that Latta should be in there. It was important."

Sending wide receiver James Scott across the middle and Bo Rather down the left side, Latta burned past strong safety Tim Gray on a "Q" corner route.

AVELLINI'S PROTECTION was good as he lofted a spiral down the right sidelines and into Latta's waiting arms. His 37-yard reception beat a poorly executed coverage by the Chiefs.

"We wanted to be in a zone coverage in that spot," Chiefs' coach Tom Bettis said. "The defensive back hesitated a little on the play and Latta just outran him.

"He made a great catch and adjusted very well to the throw. It was a tough one to swallow."

Latta looked inside for the ball and then leaned to his left as the ball drifted slowly. He was alone in the endzone when he made his over-the-shoulder catch.

"The pass was right on the money," Latta said. "I couldn't see Avellini at all. I just saw the ball and concentrated running under it."

"I HAD PLENTY of time to throw the ball," Avellini said, "but you can't wait until he gets in the endzone to throw it.

"I let it go a little early and let him run under it."

Avellini connected on 11 passes for 193 yards as the Bears fought back from a 17-0 halftime deficit.

"Our defense played under extreme pressure the second half," Bettis said. "We had poor field position and those kick returns really killed us. That was the key.

"Chicago's specialty team ranks fourth in the league and Baschagel is high in returns. The statistics will probably speak for themselves.

"We have to play in and out on every play," Bettis added. "We haven't done that consistently yet as a team."

For one play, Bettis was right.

King outlasts Wade; U.S. takes Wightman

OAKLAND — In many ways, it might have been tennis' finest hour, or two, or three.

Saturday night, with an American record crowd of 11,317 looking on, Billie Jean King and Virginia Wade played a two hour and 23 minute match in the Wightman Cup that could go down as one of the fiercest in the history of the sport.

The match was meaningless as far as the Cup competition went since the United States had wrapped up its 40th Wightman title on Thursday, but you would never know it to have watched Billie Jean and Virginia.

"You always think about pride in matches such as that," said Wade, the reigning Wimbledon champion who finally fell to King, 6-4, 3-6, 8-6. "As far as I was concerned, the Wightman Cup wasn't over. I wanted to beat Billie Jean and I'm sorry I couldn't."

Chris Evert, the world's No. 1, easily beat Sue Barker, 6-1, 6-2, and later teamed with Rosie Casals to beat Wade and Barker in doubles, 6-2, 6-4, to complete a 7-0 sweep, the first Wightman shutout since the U.S. won 6-0 in 1954.

Kitzmann cracks NCAA record book

Ohio State and Michigan may have qualified for their annual showdown for the Big Ten football championship. But Minnesota, the only conference member to show a 1977 victory over the "big two," has put a collegiate rushing record in the books.

Almost any time a spectator looked up at Champaign, Ill., Saturday he was likely to see Minnesota's sophomore fullback, Kent Kitzmann, carrying the football. He carried 57 times, a new NCAA game high. The old record was held by Oklahoma's Steve Owen, who amassed 55 carries against Oklahoma State in 1969.

The effort also eclipses a Big Ten record of 48 attempts set by Northwestern's Mike Adamle.

In improving his league record to 7-0, meanwhile, Coach Woody Hayes may have found a new way to break a tie. At least, it worked for his Buckeyes Saturday. With the score 7-7 at the half, Hayes sent his gladiators on a jog around the goalposts before the second-half kickoff.

Not to be upstaged, Indiana's coach, Lee Corso, ordered his squad on a romp around the other uprights. It didn't work for Corso. The final score was Ohio State 35, Indiana 7.

Texan wins Colgate Far East meet

SINGAPORE — Texan Silvia Bertolaccini shot a three-under-par 69 Sunday to rally from three shots off the pace and win the $100,000 Colgate Far East Open Women's Golf Tournament by a single stroke. Bertolaccini had to overtake seven other players on the final round to win the title with a 54 hole score of 214.

In a three-way tie for second place at 215 were three other Americans, Kathy Whitworth, Pat Bradley and Donna Young. They were followed by top favorite Judy Rankin and Jo-Anne Carner, making it an all American finish.

Nastase heads up World net field

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Defendiing champion Ilie Nastase of Romania and American Jimmy Connors head a field of eight of the world's best tennis players in the third World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup Tournament which gets underway Monday night.

Also competing in the $320,000 event are Australians Ken Rosewall, Rod Laver and John Alexander and Americans Dick Stockton, Roscoe Tanner and Vitas Gerulaitis.

The tournament will take place on the indoor court of Caesars Palace.

Returnee White to live with pain

BOSTON — Jo Jo White says he prefers the pain of bone spurs on his heels to the risk of surgery to remove them.

"The pain is just something I have to live with. It just takes time," said the veteran guard, who quit the Celtics Thursday in what he said was a move to jolt the team, then rejoined the next day.

White said he had discussed the bone spurs, which have been a problem for over a year, with Celtics President and General Manager Red Auerbach when the two met Friday to talk. But the nine-year NBA professional said the subject of foot surgery never came up.

Grid season ends for Elk Grove, Elgin

Viking form is too much for Grens

by VIC NOVAK

No wonder St. Laurence High School football coach Tom Kavanaugh prefers the run. He doesn't need the pass.

At least, his team did not need it against the host Elk Grove Grenadiers Saturday.

St. Laurence's Vikings, showing the form that won a state championship last year, blitzed Elk Grove for a 34-15 Class 5A state playoff victory.

A DEVASTATING wishbone offense, strong offensive and defensive line play and Elk Grove mistakes keyed the St. Laurence win.

The Vikings ground out 350 yeards while permitting the Grenadiers 165 on the ground and 63 through the air.

It did not matter that St. Laurence quarterback John Granato did not complete any of his four pass attempts.

With the touch of a conductor leading a finely-tuned symphony, Granato was busy faking out the Elk Grove defenders while handing the ball off to a punishing platoon of running backs that included Ernie Wulff, John Ewald and Jay Piotroski.

WULFF RUSHED for 154 yards and one touchdown in 20 carries, Ewald 95 yards and two touchdowns in 15 attempts, and Piotrowski 44 yards in 17 tries.

Just to add variety, Granato ran two times for 24 yards.

"They're a good team in all phases of the game," said Elk Grove coach Don Schnake. "We just got shellacked."

The game's tone was set early when St. Laurence powered its way to a 20-0 halftime lead. The Viking machine rolled for 194 yards and nine first downs, seven in the first period. Ewald's first touchdown, a 12-yard run at the 4:25 mark in the first period, culminated a 74-yard scoring march.

ON THE NEXT series, Grenadier Jack McCloughan could not hold onto quarterback Ralph Souder's pitchout, and the Vikings recovered at the Elk Grove 34-yard line.

Seven plays later, in the second period, Piotrowski fumbled in the Elk Grove end zone, but Granato recovered for the touchdown. Rick Salvino's second successful extra point kick made the score 14-0.

The score became 20-0 with 3:06 remaining when Wulff tallied from the one, concluding a 76-yard drive.

The most ominous warning sign for Elk Grove was the inability of Grenadier star running backs Jim Meyer and Jack Walsh to get going. Elk Grove rushed for only seven yards in the first period and just 30 in the second period. Meyer and Walsh gained only 19 and one yards respectively.

"WE DIDN'T think they were going to move the ball against us on the ground," said Kavanaugh.

Elk Grove looked as though it had pulled itself together when senior defensive end Dave Dopp intercepted one of Granato's pitchouts and sprinted 45 yards down the sidelines for a touchdown. The play, coming with just 9:56 gone in the third period, was followed by Souder passing to Meyer for the two-point conversion.

After a St. Laurence punt, Souder's short passes to ends Mark Angellotti and Dave Sargent, plus good running by Meyer (11 yards in three carries), moved the Grens down to the St. Laurence 37. However, a fumble by Meyer halted the Elk Grove progress as the score stayed 20-8 though the third quarter.

St. Laurence capitalized once again. Five plays into the fourth period, Edwald scored on a six-yard run. Piotrowski ran for the two-point conversion, increasing St. Laurence's advantage to 28-6.

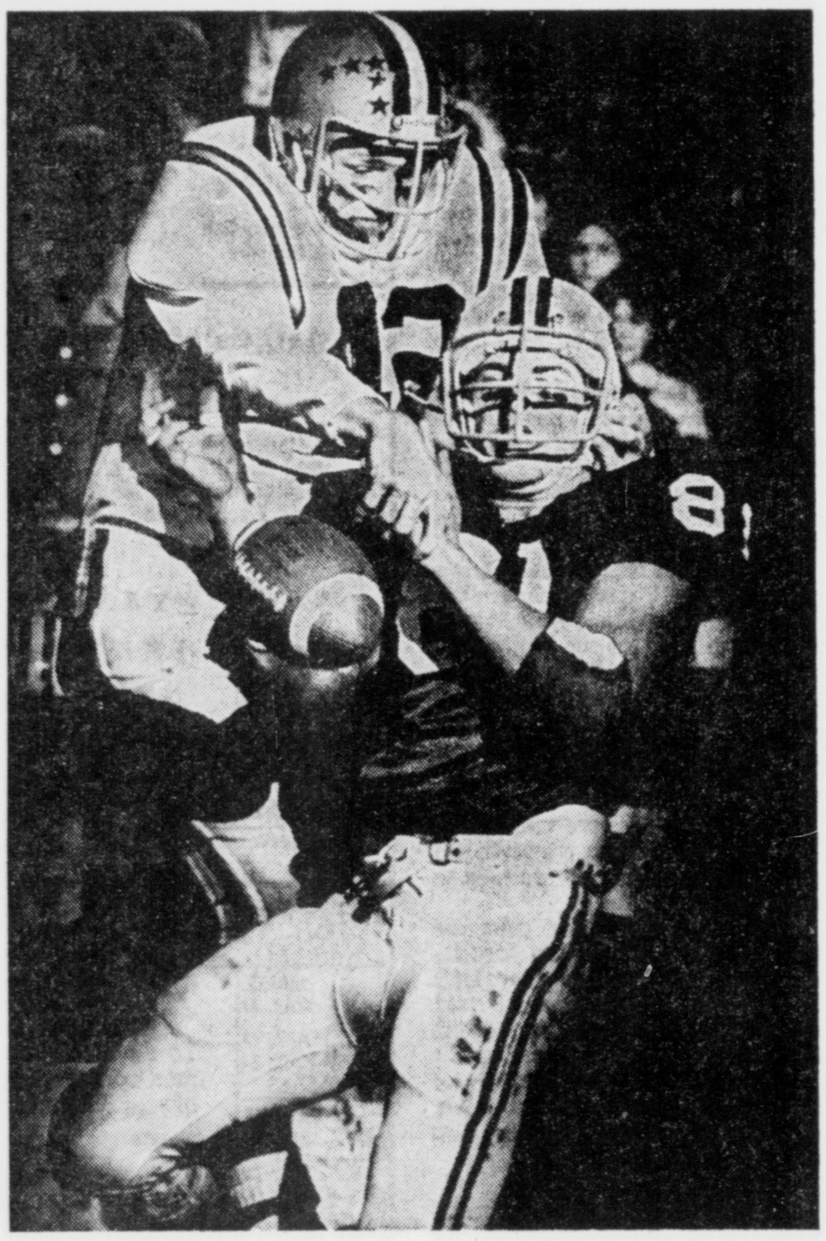
THE LEAD GREW to 34-6 when Jim Riemersma intercepted Souder's pass at the five yard line and dashed 95 yards for a touchdown.

Perhaps the game's prettiest play was Elk Grove's final touchdown.

With only 1:42 left and Elk Grove facing a first and 10 situation on its own 30, Meyer tried to sweep left, was bottled up, cut back against the grain to his right and took off down the sidelines 69 yards for a touchdown.

The loss ended an otherwise outstanding Elk Grove season. The Grens won nine games, lost only two, and captured their second straight Mid Suburban League South Division title, despite losing eight all-conference athletes from the previous season.

Catholic League champion St. Laurence, now 10-1, hosts Deerfield Saturday in the semifinal round. A triumph against Deerfield would send St. Laurence to Bloomington Nov. 26 for the championship game.



BATTLING FOR the football are St. Laurence's Jim Riemersma (42) and Elk Grove's Dave Sargent (81) in Class 5A playoff action Saturday on the Grenadier field. The pass fell incompete, and the visiting Vikings scored an impressive 34-15 victory. (Photo by Craig Camp)

Maroons finish 10-1 after 28-6 loss to East Leyden

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

A moment of silence should be observed in respect for Elgin's great undefeated success this season. (PAUSE)

It ended suddenly in Franklin Park Saturday as the airplanes flew above, as the sun shined hazily on the Maroons sideline, as East Leyden's Jim Benedetto ran wild.

Classrooms were never as solemn as the Elgin dressing room following the 28-6 defeat by East Leyden in the quarterfinals of the state football playoffs.

UNDERSTANDABLY SO. It was the Maroons' first defeat in 11 games and crushed their hopes for glory. Elgin head coach Dick Stephens took it as well as possible. His best record as a coach (10-1) was all he had left.

He made no alibis nor excuses for his team's showing. His only thoughts were of his pregame premonition.

"The coaches and I talked before the game and we all agreed. There was something missing," Stephens said.

"I felt it more than anyone. We played two tough games in a row — we're flat. Lethargic may be a better word."

EAST LEYDEN coach Jack Leese and his high-flying Eagles made reality of Stephens' statement. And did it early and somewhat continuously until late in the game.

Leyden's win over Glenbard West in the preliminary round was their finest hour. Knocking off the top state-ranked team give the Eagles the adrenalin they needed to soundly beat Elgin.

"They got whipped, all right," Leese said. "I figured we'd have a 3-1 touchdown edge. I just had a good feeling."

Benedetto backed Leese's confidence from the outset. The 5-9, 163-pound senior fullback carried the ball twice as much as Elgin's entire backfield (30) and rushed for nearly double the Maroons' entire offense (150).

BENEDETTO'S five-yard average per carry out of Leyden's wishbone attack led to the Eagles' 316 total offensive yards. Elgin was stymied with just 80. Leyden also had 20 first downs rushing.

"We don't see a 5-3 defense very often," Leese said. And with three people penetrating from the outside there will always be one man free. We wanted to stay inside."

The Eagles' ball control offense limited Elgin to 16 yards at the half on nine plays; two of which were turnovers. Taking the opening kickoff 57 yards to the Maroon 18, Leyden fumbled away an early chance.

One play later, Benedetto intercepted a badly thrown ball by Elgin quarterback Tom Hayes and East Leyden was off and running from the Maroons 29.

BENEDETTO SCORED two first-half touchdowns on 15-yard runs as the Eagles' lineman opened mammoth holes from tackle-to-tackle. Center Jim Inendido and tackle John Kasser provided the wall while guard Kurt Bankson caught the Maroons with continual trap blocks.

"They just trapped the tar out of us," Stephens said. "We expected a little more option plays on their part and they threw those counters at us, which surprised me.

"We scouted them three times and never saw them use it."

Hayes, sacked on three occasions by the Eagles swarming defense, coughed the ball up four times on interceptions.

HIS SECOND theft and a subsequent 22-yard pass from Mike Szydlowski to Frank Gargolo on the one gave East Leyden a 22-0 third quarter lead. The Eagles reserve backfield added the final score.

The Maroons finished with minus nine yards rushing as Bankson and his trio of Eagle linemen converged on the quick pitches to the outside.

Elgin's 1,000 yard rusher this season, Barney Spates gained a minus seven yards on five carries. Starks was the most productive runner for the Maroons with 18 yards.

"We've defensed the pitch extremely well all year but I must say that Spates can run. He's one of the hardest runners we've faced in some time," Leese said.

"ON ONE PLAY we broke two tackles and I said to myself, he's finally out of the bag.

"And can that No. 43 run. You need an elephant gun to bring him down."

Leese was referring to the Maroons' kickoff return specialist, Jim Stade, who nearly broke two returns. Elgin's best offensive weapon was their five kick returns for 72 yards.

Elgin's frustration ended with Mel Cole, Rick Bell, and Spates watching from the sidelines as the three were ejected by tht officials for what were called flagrant fouls.

The Maroons collected nine penalties for 80 yards.

"This game just left a bad taste in my mouth," Stephens said. "Not one deserved to be removed, especially in a game like this. I just don't like the way things happened."

Deerfield, East St. Louis win

Deerfield and East St. Louis joined St. Laurence and East Leyden in the semifinal round of the Class 5A football playoffs.

Deerfield, which ousted Prospect in opening tourney action, took care of Holy Cross 29-0. Holy Cross had advanced with a 7-0 conquest of Fremd.

The Deerfield Warriors dominated Holy Cross in an easy victory Saturday but still had some problems, committing seven turnovers.

Defensively, Deerfield was awesome, picking off three interceptions and recovering two fumbles.

East St. Louis scored in the final three minutes for a dramatic 14-12 victory over Thornridge.

Thornridge took a 12-7 lead on two second-quarter scores, but East St. Louis struck on an 83-yard screen pass from Kelvin Moore to Terry Hill for the winning touchdown.

Oswald: "South's three-notrump call was one of those 'Treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing' bids that collect lots of tops in match-point games. This one started out like a million dollars and wound up like two cents."

Jim: "After West opened the deuce of diamonds South was well on his way to riches. He knocked out the ace of clubs and waited expectantly for a diamond return."

Oswald: "It is ten years later and he is still waiting. San Francisco expert Peter Pender who sat East did some high-powered thinking. He had held off one club and had seen a deuce of spades discarded by his partner. That partner would surely have opened a five-card suit if he held one. Hence, he was 4-4-4-1. Therefore South held just one heart. Peter slapped down his king of hearts."

Jim: "Now declarer needed to try the spade finesse in order to come to nine tricks. He could not cash out all his eight winners first. When he tried the finesse the defense scored a total of six tricks and a two-trick penalty."

Ask Andy

People go nuts over sweetness of coconuts

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Barbie Westbrooks, 10, of East Point, Ga., for her question:

CAN YOU TELL ME ABOUT THE COCONUT?

Nuts are the seeds or fruit of certain plants. They are grown in shells of woody fibers. Almost all nuts are rich in protein and make a delicious and highly concentrated type of food. This certainly is the case with the tropics' contribution to the nut supply, the sweet-tasting coconut. It's a nut that is popular around the world.

Coconuts grow in clusters among the leaves of the 40- to 100-foot high coconut palm trees. A smooth, light-colored rind covers each nut and below this is a reddish-brown husk about 2 inches thick. A hard, woody shell is under the husk.

Each coconut measures about 12 inches long and about 10 inches across, making this our largest nut. And inside the hard shell is the secret that makes the coconut so popular in every part of the world: it's a ball of crisp, white, sweet-tasing meat that surrounds a bit of sugary liquid called coconut milk.

Coconut palms are native to the Pacific Ocean islands of Melanesia and the mainlands of Southeast Asia. But man now has transplanted the tree to almost all tropical and subtropical parts of the world. Leading producers of the coconut today are the Philippines, Indonesia, India, Sri Lanka and Malaysia.

Trees are planted on plantations now, and the palms are carefully tended much as any valuable agricultural crop. Each tree will bear about 100 coconuts a year, and it will take about one year for the fruit to ripen. Ripe coconuts fall to the ground, although on plantations they are usually cut down every three months or so.

The white, solid meat of the coconut is called copra. The copra is made up of about 57 per cent fat, 32 per cent carbohydrates, 6 per cent proteins and a bit of water and ash. The valuable oil is used for cooking and also in margarine and soap.

It takes about 6,000 coconuts to make one ton of copra. To prepare the product for market, the coconuts are split open and then dried in the sun or in ovens. Some of the nuts are dried by smoking.

Shredded coconut meat adds a special flavor and texture to candy and many other food items. It also is the secret ingredient that makes German chocolate cake so popular.

Coconut husks also are valuable. In the tropics the stiff fibers are woven into mats and ropes and also are used to make brooms.

Leaves from the coconut palm are used for weaving hats and baskets, while homes and even bridges are built with the wood. The sap from the trees also is used to make a sweet drink called tuba as well as an alcoholic beverage.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Gwynneth Davis of White Rock, British Columbia, Canada, for her question:

HOW IS A BLISTER MADE?

You know what happens occasionally when you put on a brand-new pair of shoes that are a bit stiff, and then you wear them all day long. You get a blister on your heel — that's what happens.

A blister is a collection of fluid below the skin which raises and puffs up the top layer of epidermis. A blister usually is the result of continuous rubbing or chafing of the skin, or from a bruise or burn.

A blister should be protected so the tissue beneath it will not become infected. A sterile bandage often is best to handle this job. If the blister is opened accidentally, the area should be disinfected with an antiseptic. The loose skin shouldn't be removed since it helps protect the sensitive skin beneath it.

Send your question on a post card to The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
